THE ASC NETWORK

ALUMNAE/STUDENTS/CAREERS

11-2 R
14438 308

TUNE IN TO the ASC Network this fall and turn on an Agnes Scott student to the career she's been looking for all along.

We've formed a national network of alumnae in various professions to advise students of opportunities in your fields, and we need your help. Your sponsorship and advice can provide the vital link between the knowledge the student acquires in the classroom and the skills she needs to implement that knowledge after graduation.

We want you to join the ASC Network and help a student make a better informed choice about her future career.

We've listed the various programs for bringing a student into your office for a look behind the scenes — whether you are a sales manager or a chemical engineer.

SHADOW PROGRAM

Invite a student to spend an afternoon with you in your office. She'll be interested in learning not only what you do, but why you like your job (or why you don't). She'll want to know the educational requirements of the job, what goes on in the office, and how you get things done.

Your advice to her about job opportunities within your field will help her make a more informed career choice.

EXTERN PROGRAM

Give a student the chance not only to see but to experience your daily work routine. An extern would spend a week during Christmas or spring vacation (on an unsalaried basis) with you and your colleagues. This short, but intensive, program makes career exploration possible for many students who otherwise might not have a chance for "on-the-job" exposure.

INTERN PROGRAM

Challenge a student by creating a new or filling an existing intern position. This longer "on-the-job" training should provide a good introduction to a career field while giving the student practical experience at performing responsible duties. Our flexible program allows several options, including taking a student on a salaried or unsalaried basis, part-time or full-time, during the academic year or summer. Many times an internship may complement a student's studies and earn academic credit, but this is not a requirement.

SPEAKER

Contribute to the College by sharing your work, graduate school, and/or lifestyle experiences with current students and other alumnae as a speaker for a career conference or workshop.

ADVISER

Offer to talk informally with a student or alumna seeking advice about your career field and entry-level jobs. Help someone relocating to your area get a jump on researching the local job market by sharing your knowledge and contacts with her.

MENTOR

Help an Agnes Scott student or alumna enter and advance within your organization or career field. Perhaps now your main contribution may be contacting us about job openings, but keep in mind our highest goal — a network of professional women who will serve as mentors for bright, aspiring protégées.

Here's how you can let us see your prime time efforts. You can be an ASC Network affiliate by returning the attached card indicating your sponsorship of one or more of the above programs. If you have any questions about the ASC Network, please contact Kathleen K. Mooney, Director of Career Planning, Agnes Scott College, 404-373-2571, ext. 365.

Let us hear from you soon. Remember, it's your show!

Join the ASC network... It's your show!

By Paul McCain, Vice President for Development

UNDER THE leadership of Alumnae Fund Chairman Dorothy (Dot) Holloran Addison '43 of Atlanta, 2,845 alumnae gave $289,648 to the 1978-79 Agnes Scott Fund. This figure includes $13,387 in bequests from four alumnae. This number of donors represents 32 percent of the active alumnae. Assisting in the Fund Drive were 55 class fund chairmen and 510 class agents.

During the past year combined gifts of 3,958 alumnae, parents and friends, businesses and foundations to Agnes Scott totaled $815,009. This amount includes gifts for endowment and for the renovation of Buttrick as well as for scholarships, equipment, and many other improvements.

Except for those who preferred to give anonymously, all individuals, foundations, and businesses who made their gifts directly to Agnes Scott are listed on the following pages. These donors made their gifts to the College from July 1, 1978, through June 30, 1979. Gifts received after the latter date will be shown in the report for 1979-80.

The Tower Circle is that group of donors whose gifts were $1,000 or more. The Colonnade Club includes those who gave $500 or more, the Quadrangle Quorum for donors of $250 or more, and the Century Club for those who gave $100 or more. The asterisk (*) in the class listing indicates an alumna who served as a class agent. Double asterisks () are for donors who are now deceased.

Please let the Agnes Scott Fund Office know of any corrections which may be needed so that we can be sure our records are accurate.

To worker and donor alike, the entire College community welcomes this opportunity to thank you and express our appreciation for your fine response.

Vice President for Development Paul McCain and Alumnae Fund Chairman Dorothy Holloran Addison '43

Agnes Scott's Endowment and Other Permanent Funds

THROUGH THE YEARS alumnae and friends of Agnes Scott have provided gifts to build the College and to strengthen its programs. Many of these gifts have made it possible to improve faculty compensation, to increase financial aid to students, and to add books for the Library and equipment for the classrooms and laboratories.

Most of the gifts received each year are unrestricted. The College can apply them to scholarship awards or to some other budget needs. When a gift is designated for a specific purpose, the College respects the donor's wish.

Some restricted gifts are made for the Endowment so that the principal will be held intact and only the income will be used for general or specific purposes. Gifts for student loan funds are meeting a growing need. Sometimes a donor will make a gift but will select a life-income plan such as an annuity, thereby benefiting both the College and the donor.

Agnes Scott is indebted to alumnae and friends for their interest and generosity in establishing the following permanent funds for the College. The amount shown for each fund represents the total of all gifts received through August 31, 1979. This list describes individually all funds of $1,000 or more, but it does not include scholarships provided annually by the donors.

Please let the Development Office know of any errors or omissions so that corrections can be made.

Special Funds

The Walters Fund, established in 1955 through a bequest from Frances Winship Walters, represents the major part of Agnes Scott's Endowment. Mrs. Walters attended Agnes Scott Institute and served as a trustee for sixteen years. As the residual beneficiary of her estate, Agnes Scott received $4,291,630, the largest amount by far that the College has ever received from any source.

The English Fund was established in 1947 by a grant of $500,000 from an anonymous foundation. The income is used for maintaining and strengthening the program of the English department.

The History and Political Science Fund was established in 1964 through a grant of $500,000 from an anonymous foundation which the College had to match with an equal amount from other sources so that the total would be $1,000,000. The income is used to maintain and strengthen the program of the Department of History and Political Science.

The General Endowment Fund of $2,008,850 represents the gifts of individuals, corporations, and foundations whose gifts ranged in amount from a few dollars to several hundred thousand dollars.

William Rand Kenan, Jr., Professor of Chemistry and chairman of the department and in recognition of his eighteen years of service at Agnes Scott. The income is used to assist the student research program.

Mary Keesler Dalton Art Fund of $30,914 was established in 1972 by Harry L. Dalton of Charlotte, North Carolina, in honor of his wife, Class of 1925. The income and principal, if deemed appropriate, is to be used to purchase works of art for the College's Dalton Galleries.

Charles A. Dana Professorship Fund of $556,000 was established in 1973 with a grant from the Charles A. Dana Foundation and matching funds from Agnes Scott. The income is used as supplemental compensation for at least four Dana Professors.

Christian W. Dieckmann Fund of $3,425 was established in 1961 by his friends to honor this professor and musician for enriching the lives of generations of students from 1905 until his retirement in 1950. The income is used for musical recordings and other equipment in the music department.

Agnes Scott Donaldson Fund of $10,000 was established through a bequest from this member of the Class of 1917. The income is used where it is most needed.

Letitia Pate Evans Fund of $100,000 was established in 1955 through a bequest from this generous benefactor and trustee of the College to provide an income for the maintenance of and improvements to the Dining Hall named in her honor.

William Joe Frierson Research Fund of $3,715 was established in 1975 by the Board of Trustees and friends to honor him for his twenty-nine years of service

Memorial Funds

Wallace McPherson Alston Professorship of Bible and Religion of $500,000 was established in 1973 by the Board of Trustees in honor of Agnes Scott's third president at the time of his retirement after a quarter century of distinguished service to the College.

Anna Josephine Bridgman Fund of $2,030 was established in 1974 by the Board of Trustees in her honor when she retired after twenty-five years of service as professor and chairman of the biology department. The income is used for the Bridgman Biology Library.

William A. Calder Fund of $2,035 was established in 1971 by the Board of Trustees to honor this professor for his twenty-four years of service as chairman of the Department of Physics and Astronomy. The income is used to purchase equipment for the department.

John Bulow Campbell Fund of $142,945 was established in 1940 by this generous trustee from Atlanta as the first gift to the College's Semi-Centennial Fund. The income is available to strengthen the College's operations.

Charles Murphey and Mary Hough Scott Candler Fund of $1,000 was established in 1963 by their three sons—Scott, Murphey, and Milton—as a memorial to these friends, neighbors, and supporters of Agnes Scott. Mr. Candler having served as a member of the Board of Trustees from 1889 to 1935 and Mrs. Candler having been a daughter of Colonel Scott, the College's founder.

Marion T. Clark Research Fund of $4,335 was established in 1978 by his family and friends as a memorial to this as professor and chairman of the chemistry department. He was the College's first William Rand Kenan, Jr., Professor of Chemistry. The income is used to assist student research.

The President's Report

"RELEVANCE" REEXAMINED

One of the rallying cries for the student protests of the late sixties and early seventies was "Relevance." Academic programs, campus movements, educational policies—even faculty and trustees—had to be "relevant," to relate directly and at once to what were felt then to be the educational, political, and social needs of the day. Even campuses which escaped actual upheaval felt the pressure to overhaul their academic offerings, and often their traditional structure of governance, in order to satisfy the insistent demands of students, and some faculty members, that courses and teaching methods (including testing and grading) be "relevant" to student concerns and needs. Looking back, we know now what some of us suspected then: that much of the "relevance" of those heady times was faddish, superficial, and ephemeral. A truth of history became again apparent: that little of the currently "relevant" is apt to be truly relevant in the future.

As the tumult and upheaval of the early seventies subsided into the new calm—or the old apathy—of the decade's middle years, the call for "relevance" in higher education began to reflect increasingly a new concern: the anxiety of young people for jobs in a time of continuing inflation and rising unemployment. This anxiety was shared by college administrators and faculty, who were experiencing the beginnings of the predicted decline in college enrollments and the increases in financial troubles which such declines were causing in more and more institutions.

One result of these concerns over shrinking enrollments and tighter budgets—and they continue to be legitimate concerns—was a renewed wave of educational changes: in curricula, in educational philosophies, in admissions policies, in testing and grading. Some of these changes were soundly conceived, in a spirit of genuine academic experimentation; others were little more than gimmicks designed to attract students in an increasingly competitive market.

Now, with the advent of the eighties, many colleges and universities are beginning to reexamine the changes made in recent years, especially those designed to insure survival by bolstering enrollment and so increasing income. To be sure, some of the changes were salutary and effective; others, however, have not worked, or worked only until their newness wore off. In addition, and more serious, some innovations were altering the essential nature of the institution, thereby endangering the very survival they were designed to insure. For example, numerous career-oriented programs introduced in some liberal arts colleges were shifting the colleges' traditional emphasis from liberal learning to professional training. In other cases, the influx of large numbers of part-time (often adult) students, in evening or weekend programs, was changing the nature of a formerly homogeneous, full-time student body in a residential campus setting. A third phenomenon was a declining emphasis on the role of religious and moral values in the curriculum and in campus life, especially in church-affiliated institutions.

The present reexamination of the effects of these changes, and others like them, has served to focus attention on some of the traditional strengths and values inherent in programs and philosophies which were abandoned or watered down on some campuses in the name of educational "relevance" and fiscal security. A renewed concern for traditional programs and values is bringing a fresh appreciation of their long-range relevance and usefulness and a realization that survival may be possible without abandoning the heritage which, over the years, has given an institution its reason for being.

What has been Agnes Scott's response to these pressures of recent years? Certainly we have felt them. We are well aware of the current desires of students, and their parents, for "relevant" and "practical" educational programs, for vocational and professional training that will develop salable skills. We are sympathetic with such concerns, and we have moved to meet them, with new courses and programs, with an expanded and strengthened Career Planning Office. But we have done so without sacrificing our emphasis on the liberal arts and our faith in their value and usefulness both for living and for earning a living. Similarly, we have recognized the widespread interest of women today in continuing their formal education, for pleasure as well as for profit. Our very successful "Return to College" program is one answer, and today about ten percent of our students are in this program. In its development and administration, however, we have to see that it is harmoniously assimilated into the campus life and programs of Agnes Scott's traditional residential character. (Our proposed new Student Center will be another step in enriching the campus life of all our students.)

Most important, in a larger society characterized by increasing secularism and moral confusion, Agnes Scott has emphatically reaffirmed its continuing commitment to our Judeo-Christian heritage and the moral and religious values inherent in it. Our Honor System continues strong and strongly supported; our students show an increasing willingness to assume the responsibilities, as well as the freedoms, of self-government; our total educational program still seeks to recognize and stress both the intellectual and the moral, or spiritual, dimensions of the life of the mind.

As I have said before in these columns, Agnes Scott has traditionally moved to the beat of "a different drummer," rarely responding to the rhythms of "trendy" academic bandwagons or falling into the lockstep of dominant national fads. Rather, we have insisted on adherence to our own stated purposes and principles, sometimes against the current of strong and seductive fashions in education.

It is tempting to say—a bit smugly, perhaps—that our traditional academic practices and principles are once more in fashion; that we have never deserted the "new" programs and policies, viz. a core curriculum, distribution requirements, rigorous standards, which many colleges are "discovering" again today. But, despite our good fortune in difficult times, we have no cause for complacency; and we must continue to welcome sound experimentation and innovation, to combine our traditional standards of excellence and coherent structure with flexibility and imaginative concern for the individual student's interests and needs.

THE COLLEGE YEAR: 1978-79

Among the pleasures of academic life is the college calendar, a unique combination of repetition and change, of traditional rites and annual innovations. Each year a fresh start, with its hopes and resolutions: new faces, new courses, new activities. But behind the kaleidoscope of change there flows the steady current of custom and ritual and steadfast purpose. The 1978-79 year, Agnes Scott's ninetieth, was no exception: enthusiastic freshmen, some new teachers and staff, changes in programs and schedules, the disruptions of campus renovation; but also Black Cat, football weekends, Honors Day, Investiture, Sophomore Parents' Weekend, Founder's Day, and, at last, Commencement!

It is my hope that our efforts in recent years to increase the flow of campus news to our various publics have made unnecessary a detailed account of each College year in these annual reports. In this conviction, this year's review is more selective, describing briefly events and developments of 1978-79 which should be of particular interest to alumnae and other friends of Agnes Scott.

Academic life at Agnes Scott continues to be demanding but reflects increasingly our current need to combine our traditional strengths with adaptations and innovations which serve better the needs of young women preparing today for lives which almost certainly will include some form of gainful employment. We continue to stress those courses which develop not only skills of writing and calculating but also those equally important intellectual disciplines of clear thinking, logical analysis, discrimination in terms of moral or ethical values, and cultivation of creativity and imagination. At the same time, we are broadening our offerings here which give students somewhat more specific acquaintance with fields of study and skills which they may find immediately helpful in later job opportunities. Our efforts this past year to strengthen our program in astronomy constitute a case in point. In addition to new course offerings and the opening of a refurbished planetarium under a professional director, we are also making available to students, especially those interested in sailing, a very practical course in navigation, to be offered at the Bradley Observatory by a widely respected sailing school in the area. Our Preparatory Program for Business, offered for the first time last year, has created great interest among students if we are to judge from last year's registration in the courses comprising it.

Gratifying also is the continuing strong interest in our Return to College program under their capable direction of Assistant Dean of the College Mildred Love Petty '61. The Office of Admissions received more than 350 inquiries in the past year, and enrolled students in this program constituted approximately ten percent of our student body. Seven RTCs were in this year's graduating class, including a grandmother. Of those enrolled in the 1978-79 academic year, almost twenty were over forty years of age, twenty were between thirty and forty, and twenty-eight were under thirty years of age. Some eighty percent were married, with the remainder single or divorced or widowed. More than eighty percent had children. As of spring 1979, more than half our RTCs were degree candidates; twenty-five were full-time students, and thirty-two were part-time students. Their academic interests range across the entire spectrum of our curriculum. Their academic performance was definitely above average, and a significant proportion captured competitive academic honors in various fields. We are enthusiastic about this program, and we hope to make it increasingly attractive to women of all ages in the Atlanta area. To that end, we are stressing the availability of financial aid for RTC students. Last year more than half of them received some form of financial aid from Agnes Scott.

In her annual report to me, Dean Julia Gary pointed out her perception of "an increased awareness on the part of our faculty for the necessity of professional growth and development." As evidence, Dean Gary called attention to the increase in faculty attendance at national and regional professional meetings and at seminars and conferences in particular disciplines. Almost fifty percent of the full-time teaching faculty attended a national meeting during the year, and at least as many participated in regional or local meetings. Faculty publications during the year represented more than one-third of our academic departments, and members of some half dozen departments presented papers at various national and regional meetings. Faculty summer grant proposals in 1979, according to Dean Gary, were "exceptionally strong and numerous." In response to this increased interest in summer work, I was able to increase our budget for summer grants, and all proposals recommended by the faculty committee were funded. While superior teaching remains our chief academic concern, it is certainly true that teaching is enhanced by opportunity for productive scholarship and further study. We intend to continue to make such opportunities available for our faculty through our summer grants program and our sabbatical policy.

Our "new" McCain Library is a source of much pleasure and satisfaction. Librarian Judith Jensen reports that the addition of some new equipment has facilitated the handling of incoming inter-library loan requests and the preparation of cataloging the new materials we acquire. She reports further that "the Library is operating smoothly," that we are increasing our collections at a steady rate, and that both student circulation and total circulation in 1978-79 were the highest in the past several years.

The Agnes Scott community suffered a grievous loss with the sudden and untimely death of Professor Marion Thomas Clark on September 9, 1978, at the very beginning of the College session. Dr. Clark, who was William Rand Keenan, Jr., Professor of Chemistry and Chairman of the Department, suffered a fatal heart attack in the mountains of North Georgia, where he and his wife were visiting friends. A native Georgian, Marion Clark earned his B.A. and M.A. degrees in chemistry at Emory University and his Ph.D. at the University of Virginia. Before joining the Agnes Scott faculty in 1963, he served as an acting chairman at the Oakridge Institute of Nuclear Studies and taught at Birmingham Southern College and Emory University. During his busy career he was a visiting scholar in chemistry at Stanford University, President of the Georgia Academy of Science, and Chairman of the Georgia section of the American Chemical Society. His many honors included membership in Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Sigma Xi. His contributions to Agnes Scott were many, and they will last: as dedicated and compassionate teacher, imaginative scholar, and Christian gentleman. Professor Clark was succeeded as Chairman of the Department of Chemistry by Dr. Alice Cunningham, who has done a superb job in rallying and carrying forward the strong department which Marion Clark had done so much to maintain.

The close of the academic year brought the retirement of three of Agnes Scott's most able and devoted teachers, whose combined service at the College totaled some eighty-three years: Mary Virginia Allen '35, Adeline Arnold Loridans Professor of French; Nancy Pence Groseclose, Charles A. Dana Professor of Biology; and Myrna Goode Young, Professor of Classical Languages and Literatures. All too rare today is the combination of commitment and competence which each of these splendid teachers and colleagues exemplified. Each was honored on Alumnae Day by tributes read by their former students at the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association, and the Board of Trustees established appropriate endowment funds in their honor. At the close of the academic year each was further honored at dinners sponsored by their departmental colleagues. A fourth long-time faculty member, Mary Fox, Instructor in Chemistry, retired from academic duties but will continue to edit the College catalog. We are grateful for her dedication and competence as both laboratory instructor and editor.

In the area of student life and student activities, it was, in Dean of Students Martha Kirkland's words, "a busy, good year." Even the inconveniences caused by the renovation of Buttrick Hall, which were borne with cheerfulness by students and faculty alike, turned out to have advantages for the campus community in bringing about a change in class locations, traffic patterns, and social group gatherings. We also learned that good teaching and learning could go on wherever good students and dedicated teachers met together.

There is little question, however, that the renovation of Buttrick Hall was the central fact of life at Agnes Scott during the past year. Now that this very sizable project is complete, at a cost of over a million dollars, it is evident that we have virtually a new classroom building, with a modern heating and cooling plant, new wiring and lighting, wall to wall carpeting in corridors and classrooms, and enlarged audiovisual facilities. New to the campus is the Media Resource Center which covers a large part of the ground floor of Buttrick Hall. Under the direction of Linda Hilsenrad, the Center contains a refurbished language laboratory, sound room and control room, a production room for the preparation of audiovisual materials (films, slides, T.V. programs), and a new film room for showing slides and motion pictures. With the completion of the Buttrick Hall project, the humanities and social sciences departments now have a teaching center which should give efficient and comfortable service well into the next century.

Beyond a doubt, the issue which generated most discussion in 1978-79 was the proposed revision of the policy regarding the use of alcoholic beverages on campus. Originating in the Representative Council of Student Government, the proposal was approved and forwarded to

to the Administrative Committee of the College (students, faculty, and administrators), where it was revised and returned to Representative Council for further consideration. The process was repeated before a final version reached the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees in May, where after careful consideration it was approved and forwarded to the full Board for action at the spring meeting. In the light of Agnes Scott's history and customs, this issue was understandably one on which there were differences of opinion. After serious discussion, the Board approved the revised policy. It provides that alcoholic beverages be permitted in dormitory rooms, dormitory kitchens, and in a designated public room in each dormitory. Consumption of alcoholic beverages is not permitted in hallways and in other public rooms of the dormitories. Enforcement of the new policy will be the responsibility of the officers and appropriate committees of Student Government, subject to review by the Administrative Committee of the College, and ultimately by the Board of Trustees. The policy will be examined at the end of each year and revised or revoked if such action appears necessary for the overall good of the College. During my tenure at Agnes Scott no issue has received more thorough and prayerful consideration than the policy relating to the consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus. It is my judgment that the Board has acted wisely in expressing its confidence in the ability of our students, through Student Government, to regulate this controversial area of their social life on campus. I have found our students responsible and trustworthy, and I believe they will administer this new policy to the credit of the College. If they are unable or unwilling to do so, I shall not hesitate to intervene.

It is especially fitting, in the light of our new alcohol policy, that the coming year will see consideration given to the development of a Campus Alcohol Abuse Prevention Program at Agnes Scott. The Program will be planned and carried out with the cooperation of the Student Health Service, and will undoubtedly adapt aspects of similar programs already in effect at other colleges and universities.

We have been pleased with the very favorable reception given our new student health policy and program. In an attempt to involve students in evaluating our health services and their professional personnel, Director of Student Health Services Rosemary Kriner circulated to students last May a general questionnaire. Of those who returned the questionnaire, almost 90% reported a generally positive experience with our health services program and staff. A number of helpful suggestions were made, and some of these will be incorporated in the coming year. As a part of our health education emphasis, the Health Services staff prepared and made available to students in the past year a non-technical handbook designed as a guide for self-care in cases of common aches and pains, fevers and chills. The manual was well received, and plans are under way to make it more widely available.

In her first year as Director of Career Planning, Kathleen Mooney has increased markedly the services and scope of the Office of Career Planning, including weekly circulation to students of information on job opportunities, part-time work, and interviews scheduled for campus visits. A recent survey of the Class of 1978 by the Office reaffirms the fact that within a very short time after leaving the College, the great majority of Agnes Scott graduates are successful in finding jobs, enrolling in graduate programs, and otherwise establishing themselves in their new lives. Under consideration for the near future are the expansion of these programs and the gradual development of a women's center at Agnes Scott to serve women of the Atlanta area. Services will include career counseling and testing and information about opportunities for women of all ages at Agnes Scott and other institutions.

Director of Financial Aid Bonnie Brown Johnson '70 reports increasing interest and use of all our financial aid opportunities, including private, state, and Federal resources as well as those of Agnes Scott. There is a steady increase in the number of students requesting and receiving financial aid, and a consequent increase in paper work and record keeping. We are very proud of our financial aid program, under Mrs. Johnson's direction, which is still able to meet 100% of officially indicated need among our students. Approximately 70% of our student body now receives some form of financial aid, with over 40% receiving more than one-half million dollars annually of Agnes Scott funds.

Assistant Dean of Students Mollie Merrick '57, in her annual report, found student attitudes in this past year to be "extremely positive." Student housing and transfer patterns were indicative of this positive attitude. We began the year with a small increase in boarding students and an 88% return of upperclassmen. Only eighteen students left the dormitories during the year as compared with thirty-one the year before. The number of students having academic transcripts sent to other institutions, an indication of possible transfer, was markedly lower. Our retention rate is accordingly far better than the national average. For these positive student attitudes and performances, the wise and understanding efforts of Dean Kirkland and Assistant Dean Merrick have been ably supplemented by Dean Gary and her staff, especially Gué Pardue Hudson '68, Class Dean for Freshmen and Sophomores. During the winter quarter the College gave students the opportunity to take an intensive reading and study skills improvement course offered on the campus by a professional organization. One hundred students completed the course, pronounced it very helpful, and recommended that the College continue to provide this service.

Despite our gratifying student retention levels of the past three years, the attraction to Agnes Scott of sufficient numbers of qualified students continues to be our chief priority. Our Director of Admissions, Judy Maguire Tindel '73, and her staff have left few stones unturned in seeking to reach and interest students throughout the world who may meet Agnes Scott's requirements. College admissions is an increasingly competitive activity, one in which Agnes Scott must continue to make its programs and strengths known amid a flood of lavish recruiting publications with which we must compete without compromise of our standards. I have the greatest respect for the energy and imagination with which Director of Admissions Judy Tindel and her staff have planned and carried out our admissions programs in a time which is fraught with uncertainties and frustrations. Although Agnes Scott has a stable admissions situation at present and an enviable student retention record, we are still unsatisfied with our recruiting efforts; and we are continuing to seek ways to improve them while remaining true to the mission and character of the College.

Student Government President Kemper Hatfield meets with President Perry weekly.

Our Return to College program, to which I have referred above, is one of the most encouraging and significant of recent developments here. The growth of the program, its enthusiastic reception, and the splendid performance of our RTC students promise a continuing strong future for it.

A new major effort to attract outstanding all-round students to Agnes Scott will be inaugurated in September 1980, when our first Honor Scholars arrive on campus. Approved in principle by the Board of Trustees in May of 1978, the Honor Scholars Program has been worked out by a faculty-administrative committee, and announcements of its inauguration have been sent to some 20,000 high schools throughout the country. In addition, alumnae screening committees have been formed, and additional information releases planned. The program is designed to bring to Agnes Scott each year at least ten outstanding freshmen whose high school records in both academic and extracurricular areas indicate outstanding ability and promise. Honor Scholars will be chosen through a national selection process from candidates who present superior secondary school records, high Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, and evidence of leadership qualities. Three regional alumnae committees will screen the applicants, and thirty-five finalists will be brought to the campus, as guests of the College, to be interviewed by the Honor Scholars Program Committee. Up to ten students will be named Agnes Scott Honor Scholars and will be eligible to receive scholarships of $2,500 each year that they continue to exhibit superior academic work while at Agnes Scott. Need is not a factor in the selection of Honor Scholars, but any proven financial need up to total College expenses will be met through the Agnes Scott College financial aid program. It is hoped that many of the thirty-five finalists each year will become interested enough in Agnes Scott to enroll here. There are a number of such programs already in operation at American colleges, and the number is increasing. We are well aware that the competition for such outstanding young women will be keen indeed. But the program is designed not only to attract and enroll superior students but also to give alumnae and other friends a large share in the finding and selection of such students. In its approval of this program, the Board of Trustees emphasized that its support should in no way decrease funds for our financial aid programs for needy students. Accordingly, funds to support the Honor Scholars Program must be "new" money designated for this purpose. I am glad to report that sufficient funds are now in hand to begin the program, but more will be required as it moves beyond its initial year. We believe that there will be a number of alumnae and other friends who are interested in recognizing outstanding students who may have no financial need.

Our efforts in recent years to increase the variety and attractiveness of Agnes Scott's publications were recognized by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) at its national meeting in New Orleans in July. Agnes Scott publications received awards and citations in eight categories ranging from letterhead stationery to College events calendars and student recruiting brochures. Hundreds of colleges and universities competed together, and no other college of Agnes Scott's size won as many awards. The chief credit for this fine showing goes to our Director of Public Relations, Sara Fountain, and her staff and consultants.

A very important function of the Office of Public Relations is the dissemination of news of coming events at Agnes Scott and of the achievements and recognition of students, faculty, and alumnae. The notable increase in both the amount and quality of such news stories is due in large measure to the excellent work of Agnes Scott News Director Andrea Helms. The many concerts, lectures, dramatic presentations, along with our summer conferences, constitute still another important aspect of our public relations program. Success of such events in recent years has been largely the result of the conscientious and efficient work of our Coordinator of Campus Events and Conferences Dorothea Markert, with the untiring efforts of Director of Physical Plant Vaughan Black and his staff. I am happy to express my appreciation to these administrators who have made not only the College events themselves but the advance announcements of them such an effective part of our total public relations program at the College.

Each succeeding year is a rich one in the quality and variety of educational, cultural, and social events which occur on the campus, most of them open to the public without charge. Again space forbids a complete listing of such events, but the following "highlights" are a sample:

Late summer saw the completion of the renovation of faculty offices and classrooms in Buttick Hall, the second major project of our overall physical plant modernization program begun in 1974. The renovation of McCain Library was completed in 1977; other projects include the rewiring and lighting of the campus (1973-74), the air-conditioning of Gaines and Maclean Chapels in Presser Hall (1974), the air-conditioning of Winship Dormitory (1974), a new roof for Rebekah Dormitory (1975), and the renovation of the Dana Fine Arts Building (1977-78). Indeed, further work on the roof of Dana has been undertaken this summer, and roof repairs have been made on Presser Hall. Currently nearing completion is the strengthening of the roof of Bradley Observatory in order to make possible the installation of outside telescope mounts as a part of our developing astronomy program. According to Dr. Robert Hyde, recently appointed Assistant Professor of Astronomy and director of the Bradley Observatory, "Students at Agnes Scott are very fortunate in having the opportunity to experience astronomy directly rather than just read about it in textbooks. The Bradley Observatory is one of the finest astronomical facilities in the Southeast." Housed in the Observatory with a thirty-inch Beck telescope are numerous small telescopes, an astronomy library, and a planetarium, as well as darkroom facilities and a lecture hall.

Engineering studies are now in progress for what will almost certainly be a third major renovation project: the modernization of Campbell Hall, classroom and laboratory building for the natural sciences. In addition to modernizing laboratories and other facilities, alterations and improvements will be made to incorporate the latest instructional procedures and to meet current safety regulations for scientific laboratories.

Planning is under way for a student center and a new recreation center (gymnasium, swimming pool, exercise rooms, and playing field). Also a major project, this social and recreational complex will be Agnes Scott's first new building in more than a decade.

The wide ranging activities of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association made 1978-79 another great year in alumnae affairs. Major credit for this banner year belongs to national Alumnae Association President Cissie Spiro Aidinoff '51 and Director of Alumnae Affairs Virginia Brown McKenzie '47, and their colleagues of the Alumnae Council throughout the country. Hundreds of other alumnae served the College as Agnes Scott Fund agents, alumnae admissions representatives, and officers and members of fifty alumnae clubs throughout the country. Again I had the pleasure of visiting a number of alumnae groups, where my admiration for our alumnae and my gratitude for their loyalty to alma mater were renewed.

A highlight of the alumnae year was the November visit to Washington, when alumnae traveled from Atlanta and other cities for three days of touring the capital (including the White House) and meeting with Washington area alumnae. Originated by Alumnae Association President Cissie Aidinoff and coordinated by Continuing Education Chairman Sylvia Williams Ingram '52, the Washington visit was a great success; and a similar trip is planned for New York City in the coming year. The Alumnae Council meeting in October set a new record when some 125 members met on the campus for an intensive day of workshops and discussions. Similarly, Alumnae Day in April set a record when more than 700 alumnae returned for the annual meeting and luncheon. Recipients of the Outstanding Alumnae awards on this occasion were Penny Brown Barnett '32 (Service to the College), Goldie Ham '19 (Community Service), and Martha Stackhouse Grafton '30 (Distinguished Career).

Once again the generous contributions of alumnae were a major factor in the success of the Agnes Scott Fund, to which some 3,200 alumnae contributed almost $290,000 to the total of almost $820,000. Indeed, as Cissie Aidinoff wrote to alumnae in the summer Quarterly, Agnes Scott is "alive and well . . . an enlightened and strong academic community." Our condition owes much to the continued interest and support of our alumnae everywhere, and we are deeply grateful.

The energetic efforts of the Office of Development, under Vice President Paul McCain's direction, and the careful financial planning of Vice President Lee Barclay and his staff resulted in another good financial year. All employees received salary increases, which this year, in keeping with President Carter's guidelines, averaged approximately 7%. The Board of Trustees authorized an increase in our guaranteed pension formula, resulting in larger income for a number of our retired employees. A good health record for the year enabled us to increase significantly our major medical coverage in the coming year for all employees with practically no additional cost to them.

As in the past, Agnes Scott received in the 1978-79 fiscal year the financial support not only of alumnae but also of hundreds of other friends—individuals, corporations, foundations—support which has again enabled us to continue strengthening our programs, facilities, and resources. For this support, in whatever amount, we are truly grateful. The accompanying table indicates the sources of these gifts and the uses to which they were allocated in 1978-79. We have tried to send out personal thanks to every donor. A number of gifts and grants are worth of special mention, however, and I am glad to record them here. From two anonymous foundations we have received generous grants of $166,850 and $20,000, the first to aid in the renovation of Buttrick Hall, the second for scholarships. Marian Franklin Anderson '40 (Mrs. Paul H.) and her husband made a gift of $51,306 to establish the Rufus C. and Wynie Coleman Franklin Memorial Scholarship, the income from which will aid Agnes Scott students from Emanuel County, Georgia. From the estate of the late Mrs. Helen B.

Longshore came an additional $21,368 to be added to the scholarship established in 1977 in her memory. With a gift of $20,000 the John and Mary Franklin Foundation completed the last two-thirds of its grant for audiovisual equipment. The J. M. Tull Foundation gave $20,000 for student scholarships. Mrs. Howard P. Conrad, mother of the late Patricia Conrad '63, added $15,000 to the Howard P. Conrad Scholarship established in 1971 in memory of Patricia. To assist in the renovation of Buttrick Hall, the David, Helen, and Marion Woodward Fund made a grant of $15,000. From Ruth Anderson O'Neal '18 (Mrs. Alan S.) came gifts of $12,000 for additions to the Ruth Anderson O'Neal and the Neal L. Anderson Scholarships. A bequest of some $11,800 from the estate of the late Marie Scott O'Neill '42 (Mrs. Frank Q.) established the Marie Scott O'Neill Scholarship. From Mr. and Mrs. Hal Smith we have received a gift of $11,298 to add to the Hal and Julia Thompson Smith '31, Scholarship Fund. An unrestricted gift of $10,650 was received from Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Cameron (Betty Henderson '43). With a gift of $10,000 Miss Bess Patton established the Lillian Patton Latin Scholarship in honor of her sister of the Class of 1920. From the Gertrude and William C. Wardlaw Fund came a gift of $10,000 to aid in the renovation of Buttrick Hall.

Agnes Scott's share of the contributions made by Georgia business firms to the Georgia Foundation for Independent Colleges in 1978-79 was $43,188, the largest in recent years. We continue to be most grateful for this expression of confidence in Agnes Scott by the Georgia business community.

In the summer issue of the President's Newsletter I introduced to you two new members of the Board of Trustees. Pictures and biographical sketches of these new trustees were included; accordingly, I shall merely record their names here, together with my conviction that they will bring fresh vision and strength to the leadership of Agnes Scott: Edward P. Gould, President of the Trust Company Bank of Atlanta, and the Reverend Wallace M. Alston, Jr., Minister of the Nassau Presbyterian Church, Princeton, New Jersey. Two faithful trustees of many years, Mary Warren Read '29 (Mrs. Joseph C.) and William C. Wardlaw were elected Trustees Emeriti. We have been enriched by their wise counsel and active support. Also at the spring meeting of the Board of Trustees Alex P. Gaines was succeeded by Lawrence L. Gellerstedt, Jr., as Chairman of the Board. The College is greatly indebted to Mr. Gaines for his wise and efficient chairing of the Board through a significant period in life of the College. He will remain active as a trustee. Succeeding Mr. Gellerstedt as Vice Chairman of the Board is trustee G. Conley Ingram. As Vice Chairman, Mr. Ingram will chair the Executive Committee of the Board. He is also Chairman of the Board's Development Committee.

PLANNING FOR A LEAN DECADE

It has been my hope since coming to Agnes Scott that these annual reports of each year's activities should serve as periodic reassurance to the College community and our friends that we on the campus continue true, and freshly responsive, to the historic mission of the College. Our alumnae and others who support us are entitled to such reassurance, especially in times so fraught with difficulties for private liberal arts colleges. I hope that these reports show also that as we seek to deal with daily concerns in each College year we are also actively mindful of Agnes Scott's future needs. Again this is especially important in a time when virtually all projections point to the 1980s as a decade which will sorely try the survival power of many American colleges and universities, especially those in the private sector. Population projections indicate a significant drop nationally in the number of young people of traditional college age. Combined with continuing inflation and widespread economic uncertainty, this decline will bring to many colleges grave financial problems.

It is with these somber predictions very much in mind that our planning for Agnes Scott's future has been carried out. Last year I reported to you that the Long-Range Planning Committee (consisting of students and faculty as well as administrators, trustees, and alumnae) submitted to the Board of Trustees its analysis of Agnes Scott's needs—human, material, and financial—for the next quarter century, together with proposals for securing the resources which will enable the College to meet the demands of this crucial period. I think you will be interested in the brief summary statement of the Long-Range Planning Committee's report entitled, "Agnes Scott Looks to the Future":

"As Agnes Scott approaches its centennial in 1989 and then prepares for the twenty-first century, the Long-Range Planning Committee recommends to the Board of Trustees for its consideration the following development program:

1. Attract and retain a select student body by maintaining a curriculum strong in traditional liberal arts disciplines and values yet responsive to the needs of young women interested in professional and business careers.
2. Attract and retain a highly qualified faculty through competitive compensation and ongoing opportunities for their professional growth.
3. Encourage the factors which strengthen the College's Christian emphasis and heritage, its Honor System, and its representative Student Government.
4. Plan and construct new physical education and recreational facilities as well as a new student center and complete the renovation and improvement of the present buildings on campus.
5. Organize and launch a financial drive which will provide as soon as possible the $50,000,000 Agnes Scott will need to accomplish the above objectives."

The Board of Trustees has accepted in principle these recommendations of the Long-Range Planning Committee. They constitute a large order, with a large price tag. One's immediate reaction is apt to be: Can Agnes Scott raise in the next twenty years such sizable funds, funds which in effect will double our present resources?

In considering such a question, I turned to College records of twenty years ago, in the 1958-59 College catalog and in President Alston's annual report for that College year. I found encouragement in such a review. It revealed evidence of steady growth, in resources as well as expenses, when the figures are compared with those of 1978-79. For example, our Library collection has doubled in size since 1959, from 75,000 to over 150,000 volumes; from 339 periodical titles to almost 800 today. Our operating budget has increased from approximately $1,354,000 in 1959 to over $5,500,000 in 1979. Our assets in plant and equipment have almost tripled from just over $5,000,000 in 1959 to almost $15,000,000 in 1979. Finally, our endowment income has increased from some $365,000 in 1959 to over $2,250,000 in 1979. The clear implications of these growth figures of the past twenty years are twofold: first, we must maintain this kind of growth in resources if we are to continue as an outstanding college; and second, such goals are not unrealistic. We have more than doubled our resources in the past twenty years, thanks to the hard work, careful planning, and generosity of many; and we can do it again in the next twenty years!

Chairman of the Board L. L. Gellerstedt, Jr.

Vice Chairman Conley Ingram

In concluding this report of another good year, let me return again to the summary statement of our recommendations for the future. They deal primarily with people and with human values. They call for the maintenance of a select student body, of a highly qualified faculty, for the continued encouragement of our heritage of academic excellence, Christian principles, and concern for the individual. Finally, they call for the maintenance of a physical plant and educational equipment which a select study body and a strong faculty will need for the quality educational experience which Agnes Scott has always sought to provide. Most of the needed new money will go for additional endowment for academic development (including faculty and programs) and student financial aid. People and their needs thus continue to be our chief concern.

Implicit in these recommendations for the future is the renewed dedication of Agnes Scott's leadership to the principles which have guided the College since its founding: a positive commitment to liberal arts education, i.e., to the joys as well as the uses of learning; an abiding faith in the human values of our Judeo-Christian heritage; the maintenance of academic and personal standards of excellence; concern for the individual's twofold search for self-fulfillment and service to others. This is the kind of college we have been for almost a century. It is the kind of college which this report and its recommendations indicate we intend to be in the future. Significantly, it is the kind of college which current educational research is showing to be the most effective and satisfying college experience yet devised in this country.

Plans are already under way for organizing and carrying out the programs necessary to secure the funds and with them the resources needed to meet the challenges of the next quarter century. I know our efforts can be successful. I am convinced, too, that these efforts will enable us to transmit to those who follow us at Agnes Scott a strong and lively institution, proud of its heritage and confident of its future.

Book Reviews

Burnsite by Shirley Graves Cochrane '46. The Washington Writers' Publishing House, Washington, D.C. $3.00.
Reprinted with permission from Washington Review, August-September 1979.

SHIRLEY COCHRANE'S collection of poetry, Burnsite, is a strong one, offering thirty-three poems whose thematic undercurrents are those of loss and renewal. It is satisfying to read poems which have been seriously assembled with a plan in mind, poems which clearly assert a reason for their being bound together. These poems are subtle and tough, mature and generous.

The title poem, "Burnsite," placed at the beginning of the book serves with the last poem, "After the Fire," as a frame, the former posing a question and the latter approaching an answer. What falls in between is almost always an array of heartening and impressive work.

There is a suggestiveness in Cochrane's work which, curiously enough, leaves no room for doubt. She is able to write around a subject, without naming it exactly, leaving the reader to draw from a poem its certain knowledge.

Shirley Cochrane's poetry is intimate. One senses a person, perhaps a member of her family, behind her poems, prompting their inspiration. But the integrity of her images allows these poems to include us all.

The poems in Burnsite are, in the best sense, like relatives, individual in their form and content, while belonging to the same family tree. "After the Fire" makes a highly satisfactory closing poem, calling forth echoes from the first poem in the collection, in which the process of life persists, as does this smart and honest poet. Gardner McFall.

Halfway Home by Julia Coley Duncan '62. St. Martin's Press, New York, New York. $10.95.
Reprinted with permission from the An-niston Star, June 10, 1979.

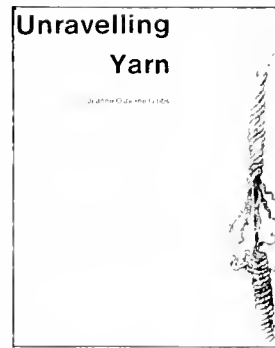

IF YOU were raised in a small Southern town a few years ago, and perhaps the custom survives, you'll remember the call of a young friend: "Walk me halfway home!"

Julia Coley Duncan remembers. She remembers in exquisite, sometimes bittersweet joy that point in childhood when the edge of young wonder meets the first hard, resisting, and instructing stones of maturity. Her twelve-year-old Annie Trammell, growing up (to her own wonder and amazement and to the frequent astonishment of her family) in small, railroad-through-the-middle-of-town Winton in the fifties, fights the walls of the grown-ups' world pressing inward upon her.

But the world is not about to let any of us alone very long, and it doesn't ignore Annie. The fifties are a time of change, and change often means pain. In small towns like Winton, the change in the fifties meant the pain of challenge and loss as old ways had to accommodate the new. It also meant the pain of ugliness sometimes which, in turn, often revealed nobility.

In the explosive crisis that crackles across Winton, Annie bears a deep, crucial witness, not only to the event that shocks her town and stirs her father, but also to her first close experience with the personal loss of death, the pain of a beloved small world breaking up and the burdens of maturity.

If Halfway Home sounds a little like To Kill a Mockingbird II, that is both fortunate and unfortunate, fortunate in that Julia Coley Duncan shares qualities of things long remembered with Harper Lee, unfortunate in that Halfway Home is its own book, and it owes no debts to other works. Cody Hall

Unravelling Yarn by Jeanne Osborne Gibbs '42. H. Dan Abrams, Atlanta, Ga. $8.95.
Reprinted with permission from Georgia Life, Autumn 1979.

IN HER SECOND book of poems, Unravelling Yarn, Jeanne Osborne Gibbs, well-known Georgia poet, has set words free in extraordinary ways. Her writings reveal a sensitive and provocative search for the meaning of life and the entangled skein of circumstance. The author presents a true lyric adventure in a meditative world.

Her poems take their form straight from life but escalate their impact through alternating symbol and reality. The energy of her expression seems to flow from an appreciation of the original Source. Her poetry has that consistent life and strong sense of abundance shown in these lines:

Where once I saw all men by
my reflection,
I see a hand that points a new direction.

In poverty there is a certain form of wealth which is reflected in her poem, "Poor Man's Paradise":

Why is it flowers never bloom so well
As on some low unpainted
hollow shell

Of house where poor men dwell?

The publisher has made a distinguished book with format and illustrations worthy of the poetry. Unravelling Yarn is dramatically illustrated by Vee Brown, professor of art at Young Harris College. He seems equally skilled in abstract, imaginative, and realistic drawings.

Jeanne Osborne Gibbs has a strong commitment to craftsmanship, and she is attuned to the purity of sound and its significance. Her contribution to literature helps to restore man's belief in his own image and self. Jannelle Jones McRee

Evelyn Hanna, Author of

By Jane Guthrie

BACK BEHIND THE FOUNTAIN on Roswell Square, surrounded by old magnolias and oaks, overlooking two verandas, white-columned and windowed from floor to ceiling, in a green armchair-desk, sits a brilliant mind, housed in the body of Evelyn Hanna. Now seventy-eight, the author of Blackberry Winter, Sugar in the Gourd, and The History of Upson County, continues to read voraciously and to comment on everything with a breathtaking wit and insight that both startles and delights.

What does she think of the novels of today? "Oh, this is the age of biography," she replies, and spreads her hands over several books on the ottoman before her. "Some of the best biographies ever are being written now—really good ones, well-researched. Take, for example, this book on the life of Charlotte Brontë. Then there have been others in recent years on Thomas Wolfe, Edith Wharton, but of course the really superb biography, the best ever written is Boswell's Life of Johnson."

One of the daily tasks of Chestene, the indispensable caretaker of "Miss Evelyn," is to return armfuls of books to Roswell's Public Library, which Evelyn helped found and to bring back another armful for the next few days' reading. "The mind just keeps on working," Evelyn explains, "although the body is degenerating."

To understand the mind of Evelyn Hanna is to go back to the days when she was young—a fiery-eyed young lady, quite surprisingly the author of a novel which was being considered for a Pulitzer Prize Award, standing in the office of her English publisher in London, demanding to know why the word, "Rebs" in her novel had been changed to "Reds," and "muscadine wine" to "nettle beer"! Surveying her, in her tartan-plaid suit and her red felt breton, Robert Sommerville, who was to become her husband, must have been amused and impressed that an American author would cherish her southern traditions to the extent of crossing the Atlantic to defend them. Of course, the words "Rebs" and "muscadine wine"

Evelyn Hanna Sommerville '23

were reinstated in the next English edition of Blackberry Winter which was issued to an eager public under the modest library advertisement of "Much better than Gone with the Wind."

And to understand how Evelyn Hanna became a writer is to go back to her childhood when she wrote her first essay one Sunday afternoon on "The Cruelty of Parents," after being told by her mother that she must take off her best Sunday dress on coming home from church and Sunday School. The essay proved to be a very satisfying experience, as well as therapeutic. Then, not long after leaving college, Evelyn was commissioned by the Upson County Historical Society to write its story. Accompanied by her mother, she went into courthouses and family archives to uncover pages of fascinating facts equal to any early American pioneer drama. The seeds for her forthcoming novel were found here.

Like any red-blooded American author, Evelyn wound up in New York City, with a manuscript under her arm and stars in her eyes. Here she and a girlhood friend took an apartment and soon made contact with Columbia University, where two professors suggested important changes in the sequence of her novel. After much work, "hard, laborious work," as Evelyn reminds young writers, Blackberry Winter was published and she became the newest discovery of the literary world. Her scrapbooks of newspaper articles show the acclaim she received and the audiences she lectured to, from New York to California. Among her literary acquaintances and advisors were Jonathon Daniels, Conrad Aiken (whose house she lived in in England) Edna Ferber, Robert Nathan, Colonel and Mrs. Clifford Early, and many others.

After a long and arduous pursuit, Robert Sommerville finally won the hand of his American novelist. They settled down in a flat in London—she to write for several years her famous column for the Atlanta Constitution and he to continue to manage the business which he had inherited from his father, Robert L. Sommerville, Esquire. Robert also continued to hold the position of sub-editor of the London News Chronicle. Eventually, the couple came to America and to the South, where Evelyn really belongs. For the next decade, their antebellum house built in 1840 absorbed their creative abilities. As director of Atlanta's transit system and lecturer at Emory University, the University of Alabama, and the University of Wisconsin, Robert Sommerville gave to the business world and to the intellectual world distinct contributions. He and Evelyn were "at home" on "Holly Hill," their restored raised cottage in Roswell, and at their beautifully furnished apartment in Atlanta. In 1968 Robert had a series of heart attacks which finally claimed his life. Evelyn was left a widow.

Wandering through the house which she and her English squire restored, Evelyn points out many reminders of the past. A bronze vase she found in Italy, the wrought iron fencing she and Robert brought over from an old English mansard roof in London, the Italian marble fireplaces that were shipped to Savannah, then carried by oxcart to "Holly

Blackberry Winter, Visited

odes '38

Hill" when the house was being built. If you are lucky and the weather is right, you may have tea and shrimp bisque served by Chestene on the back veranda which runs the full length of the house. Looking down on the landscaped grounds below you can see the small greenhouse where Robert grew his favorite orchids.

Finally, you will most certainly walk up the twenty-three steps to fiddler's gallery where the Hanna library is housed. Here where orchestras once played for balls in the spacious hall below, row after row of books, first editions, bearing famous autographs, appear. Recently, Evelyn has divided most of her books between Emory and Agnes Scott, to be awarded after her death. For she says, "These are my children. I have never had any others." In the coveted collection are a first edition of A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, a first American edition of Lord Byron's poems, and a first edition of John Brown's Body. Autographed editions include Boswell's Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides with Samuel Johnson and a novel by Somerset Maugham. A rare volume, a first edition of Blackberry Winter bound in maroon morocco leather, will go to her nephew in New York. And a few volumes of special interest will go to her niece in Atlanta, who is already "on the downward path" of becoming a bookworm, as Evelyn puts it.

Of her brief stay at Agnes Scott,

Evelyn says, "Agnes Scott is tough. You have to be tough to graduate from there. I couldn't take the math and science. I wanted only to read and write. By the time I entered high school I had already read all of the classics in my father's library—Thackeray, Dickens, Shakespeare, Sir Walter Scott, Edward Bulwer Lytton, and others.

Perhaps the spirit of Evelyn Hanna is in part of every character she has created in her novels. Whatever it is, she possesses determination. Although a semi-invalid, she walked up the twenty-three steps to her fiddler's gallery each day in preparation for her appearance as one of our beloved and revered alumnae authors at Agnes Scott College's 1979 Alumnae Day. She is indomitable.

Freshmen Score High on Academic/Leadership Ability

By Judy Maguire Tindel '73
Director of Admissions

ON SEPTEMBER 5, nearly 150 new freshmen arrived at Agnes Scott. The day was the culmination of what had been for many of the students a long, intensive search for the right college.

The members of the class of 1983 were carefully selected by Agnes Scott's Admissions Committee from a slightly larger freshman applicant pool than in recent years. The Admissions Committee had spent many hours in 1978 and 1979 reviewing hundreds of files before offering admission to the young women who gave evidence of the ability to succeed in Agnes Scott's demanding programs. The class of 1983 chose Agnes Scott over many other colleges by which they were also accepted; these colleges include Emory, Vanderbilt, UNC-Chapel Hill, Duke, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Rice, Georgia Tech, University of Georgia, William and Mary, and Furman. The students' primary reason for enrolling at Agnes Scott was the College's reputation for academic excellence.

The academic profile of the class is outstanding. Nearly 33% of the freshmen ranked by their schools placed within the top 5% of their high school classes, 51% ranked within the top 10%, seventy-eight within the top 25%, and virtually all within the top 50%. Seventy-three percent of the class graduated from public schools and 27% from private. There are four Agnes Scott College National Merit Scholars in the class.

SAT averages for the Agnes Scott class contrasted to national trends towards declining scores and increased over 1978 averages by several points. 1979 SAT score averages for women are as follow:

	National	Southern Regional	Georgia	Agnes Scott
Verbal	423	405	385	538
Math	443	423	405	529
Composite	866	828	790	1067

The 1979 ACT profile is much the same with the Agnes Scott average of 25 substantially higher than the national average for women of 17.9 and the southern regional average of 16.5.

The geographical distribution of the class includes twenty-one states, Puerto Rico, Austria, Australia, Colombia, Finland, and Germany. The Southeast continues to be the most heavily represented region and Georgia the largest state. Forty-four percent of the class are residents of Georgia.

Extracurricular activities of the class reflect heavy academic honors with 85% of the class having received awards. There is great interest in civic and community involvement with 57% of the class noting such commitments while in high school. Nearly 50% of the class listed active involvement in athletics including among others soccer, gymnastics, track, cross country, and even weight lifting! Over a third of the class held positions of leadership in school or extracurricular activities. A third of the class listed interest and involvement in activities related to the fine arts.

There are eighteen daughters of alumnae and twelve sisters of alumnae in the class. The educational level of parents of the freshmen is varied: 26% of the fathers and 45% of the mothers have no or some college, 33% of the fathers and 41% of the mothers hold bachelor's degrees, 11% of the fathers and 11% of the mothers hold master's degrees, 21% of the fathers and 1% of the mothers have advanced professional degrees, and 9% of the fathers and 2% of the mothers hold Ph.D.s. Parental occupations vary greatly, although a high percentage of fathers are employed in the medical, legal, and engineering professions and in business. In addition, there are, among others, ministers, college professors, members of the armed services, a mayor, a diplomat, a forklift driver, an aircraft mechanic, a sheet metal worker, and an FBI agent. Mothers' occupations include many elementary and secondary school teachers, three college professors, a physician, an accountant, a police department radio dispatcher, a marriage and family counselor, and an interior designer.

Financial aid continues to be essential to students entering Agnes Scott and Agnes Scott continues its commitment to meet their financial need. Nearly 45% of the 1979 freshmen receive institutional need-based aid. The college tuition, fees, room, and board total $5,050 in 1979. Of those freshmen receiving financial aid, the following chart provides a picture of income ranges and average awards.

Total Family Income	% of aid recipients within each income range	Average award (including ASC grants, loans, employment, and State and Federal grants)
$ 0 - 9,999	15%	$4,620
$10,000 - 14,999	18%	$4,381
$15,000 - 19,999	18%	$3,849
$20,000 - 24,999	26%	$2,694
$25,000 - 29,999	12%	$2,134

$35,000 - 39,999	1%	$ 400
$40,000 -	1%	$3,604

A quick review of the freshman class academically, geographically, socio-economically, and socially reveals a strong, able, and diverse group of well-rounded young women. We are proud to call them Agnes Scott students.

Franklin Scholarship Fund Established

By Andrea Helms

SWAINSBORO, GEORGIA, native Marian Franklin Anderson '40 of Atlanta has established, in memory of her parents, the Rufus C. and Wynie Coleman Franklin Memorial Scholarship Fund for Emanuel County (Georgia) high school girls who attend Agnes Scott.

Marian's father, Dr. Rufus C. Franklin, was a physician in Emanuel County for over twenty-five years, and her mother, Wynie Coleman, was a native of the county.

The chief purpose of the Franklin Memorial Scholarship Fund, in Marian's words, is "to encourage the attendance at Agnes Scott of superior students from Emanuel County who wish to receive an education of high quality such as the one which was offered me by the College."

Marian has given over $50,000 for the scholarship fund. This gift is large enough to provide a student from Emanuel County with at least $2,500 a year while she is attending Agnes Scott.

Should a scholarship student have financial need above the amount of the Franklin Memorial Scholarship, such need will be met fully through Agnes Scott's regular financial aid funds. However, financial need is not a primary qualification for being awarded the scholarship.

Recipients of the Franklin Scholarship will be selected by the College on the basis of character and superior academic achievement and promise. The scholarship is renewable so long as the recipient's performance lives up to the promise indicated by her entering record.

Alumnae Clipping Service Requested

THE AGNES SCOTT news office and the alumnae office are establishing an Alumnae Clipping Service. We're asking alumnae everywhere to send us clippings about Agnes Scott College, her students, her faculty and administration, and her alumnae.

The news service sends out hundreds of stories each year and needs to evaluate their usage throughout the country. The alumnae office wants clippings about alumnae to augment its records. The office of alumnae affairs keeps individual folders to preserve information and correspondence pertaining to each alumna.

The College is interested in any item that mentions Agnes Scott, her history, her present scene, her students, her alumnae; stories about Honors Day, Who's Who, Founder's Day, alumnae club meetings; births, marriages, deaths;

news stories, feature stories, pictures with cutlines.

If you send us a clipping at the Alumnae Office, Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia 30030, we'll send you a postpaid return envelope to use the next time you find an Agnes Scott item in one of your local publications. We'd appreciate your help by being the Alumnae Clipping Service.

New Assistant Joins Staff

By Jet Harper '77

DENISE HUNTER MCFALL has joined the Agnes Scott staff in a dual role as assistant to both the director of admissions and the dean of students. A graduate of North Carolina Central University with a B.A. in English and education and a native of Westchester County, New York, Denise comes to Agnes Scott after two years at Emory University.

From the Admissions Office Denise works with Student Admissions Representatives and also travels for recruitment, focusing on national metropolitan areas, particularly in the Southeast. In addition, Denise serves as liaison between the Admissions Office and the Public Relations Office. Her work in the Office of the Dean of Students consists of advising various student organizations, such as Students for Black Awareness, and she will also assume counseling activities.

While at Emory's Nell Hodgson Woodruff School of Nursing, Denise was project director for a federally-funded project aimed at the recruitment, admission, and retention of minority students into the university's various academic programs. Denise was responsible for the development and implementation of this program, as well as the creation of appropriate academic and non-academic support systems, such as tutorial sessions and counseling. She belonged to several committees, including the university's Affirmative Action Subcommittee on the Handicapped, Committee on the Status of Women, Black Caucus, Employee Training Task Force, and the nursing school's Affirmative Action Committee. She was the chairperson of the school's Minority Recruitment and Retention Advisory Committee.

Prior to moving to Atlanta, Denise and husband Bernard lived in Charleston, South Carolina, where she was assistant advertising director and media specialist for the Sam Solomon Company, and earlier, copy chief and production coordinator for a radio station there. Her work in New York, where Denise lived before moving to Charleston, includes media and broadcast work as well as teaching in an elementary school.

Denise is pleased and excited to be part of the Agnes Scott community. She sees the College's flexibility in fitting the job to the person as one of the strengths of a small college. Denise says she is working in "three areas of great interest to me—interacting with students, recruiting and admissions, and also utilizing my public relations background." With her talents and experience, Denise is a welcome asset to the College community.

Association Plans Tours

Great Britain Trip

THE AGNES SCOTT ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION is planning two trips in 1980, one to Great Britain and one to Italy. Both tours offer two options.

The nine-day Option I will provide accommodations in small inns or hotels in Stratford, Continental breakfast and dinner, free use of a rental car with unlimited mileage allowance and deductible collision insurance throughout the stay (exclusive of gasoline), transfer from London airport to Stratford and return, and a fully staffed hospitality desk. This option costs $989 per person.

Option II of the Great Britain tour is a nine-day bus tour through England and Scotland with stays in London, Stratford, Harrogate, Edinburgh, and Carlisle and includes Continental breakfast and lunch or dinner every day and a tour escort. Cost is $1,099 per person.

Italian Trip

The Italian trip is scheduled for October of 1980, leaving from Atlanta and arriving in Rome, with a duration of eight days and seven nights. Option I will concentrate on Rome and the Vatican City with optional tours that can be arranged to Florence; Naples/Capri/Sorrento; Pompeii; and Venice. The cost for Option I is $689 per person.

A bus tour, Option II visits Rome, Venice, and Florence and costs $829 per person. Both options of the Italian tour provide accommodations in first class hotels (double occupancy), Continental breakfasts every day, private bus transfers from airport to hotels and return. Option I will provide a hospitality desk, and Option II includes a full-time tour director.

Watch for further notices.

In Memoriam

ARTHUR F. RAPER, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., former acting professor of sociology at Agnes Scott from 1933 until 1939, died August 10, 1979. He was a resident of Oakton, Va.

In the late 1920s and for most of the 1930s Mr. Raper was research secretary for the Atlanta headquarters of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation. He subsequently served as a U.S. adviser on rural, urban, and industrial development to foreign countries. He was the author of Tragedy of Lynching, Preface to Peasantry, Sharecroppers All, Tenants of the Almighty, and Rural Taiwan—Problem and Promise.

Mary Currie, B.A., M.C.E., a former director of Christian education who came to Agnes Scott in 1965 to serve on the dean of students' staff as senior resident, died August 15, 1979, at the home of her sister in Hamlet, N.C. Before she left the campus in 1976, she had served as assistant dean of students and later, as special development officer.

Eleanor Brown McCain, wife of Paul Moffatt McCain, died July 5, 1979.

Though she was not an alumna nor a member of the faculty or administrative staff, she was an integral part of the College community. She first became associated with the College as daughter-in-law of former President James Ross McCain; then, in 1969 when her husband, Paul, became Agnes Scott's vice president for development, they moved to South Candler Street, adjacent to the campus, where she lived the remainder of her life. She was a friend to all who knew her.

Sentimental Pilgrimage

By W. Edward McNair

THIS PAST summer it was my good fortune to journey for the fourth time to Stratford, Ontario, to attend the marvelous dramatic performances that are annually presented there. This time I planned my trip to include a stop in Alexandria, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, so that I could visit the grave of Agnes Irvin Scott for whom Agnes Scott College is named. Some might call this a sentimental pilgrimage. Perhaps it was.

At any rate, in the early afternoon of August 10 I reached Alexandria, a small town in the Juniata River valley. Alexandria (population 495) is off the main road, and one will not ordinarily pass through it unless he takes special pains to do so. It is located in the mountainous country of central Pennsylvania about two hundred miles west of Philadelphia. When one observes the rugged terrain, he cannot help marveling at the determination and strength of those who, like Agnes Irvin and her mother, pursued their way into such territory before the days of canals, railroads, and highways.

Agnes Irvin came to Alexandria from Ireland in the spring of 1816. She was then almost seventeen years old. Five years later she married John Scott. In 1829 her fourth child, George, was born, and it was he who founded Agnes Scott College and named it for his mother.

The old Presbyterian burying ground, now the town cemetery in Alexandria, is on a gentle rise overlooking the community. I had no knowledge of which grave was Agnes Scott's; thus, there was no way of finding it but to canvass all the graves in the old part of the plot. Fortunately, because the grave is clearly marked, I was able to find it in a matter of minutes and pay my respects to this woman whose name I have used thousands of times.

On the gravestone there is simply her name and the appropriate dates, etc., but nothing about how she has been immortalized through one of America's most distinguished colleges for women. Perhaps the correction of this omission might become a College project. Anyway, I'm glad I went to Alexandria—possibly the first Agnes Scott College person ever to visit Agnes Scott's grave!

With the Clubs

Barrow-Gwinnett-Newton

BGN ALUMS turned out in the largest numbers yet to hear Dr. Edward McNair's popular talk on "Anecdotes of Agnes Scott" at their September 14 meeting in Lawrenceville, Ga. Club President Julia Kennedy '60 reported that a letter from Lois Turner Swords '77, assistant to the director of admissions, was read, informing the group that seven high school students from the BGN area were entered at Agnes Scott. The club was thanked for its successful recruitment efforts. Plans for the future include a business meeting in November and guest speakers for February and May.

Charleston

A SUMMER fete honoring current students and prospective students of the Charleston, S. C., area took place August 21 at the home of Ruth Hyatt Heffron '70 in Mount Pleasant. Club President Allyn Smoak Bruce '68 reported "a very successful evening," which gave alums, students, and prospective students an opportunity to get acquainted.

Columbia

SOUTH CAROLINA alums in the Columbia area invited returning and prospective Agnes Scotters to a Coke party given at Quail Run Apartments August 11. Club Secretary Janet E. Short '73 wrote that the group is very much interested in helping the College recruit new students and has hosted a number of parties in the past also for this purpose.

Dallas-Fort Worth

FRESHMAN ANNE DRUE MILLER and her parents, John and Jane Miller, were honored by alums and husbands at a dessert party August 22 at the home of Susan Aspinall Block '64. Reporting on the event, Susan wrote, "Have you ever seen a stack of Silhouettes spanning almost 40 years of Agnes Scott? During dessert and coffee Anne Drue viewed all the annuals brought by alumnae, ranging from Winnie Kellersberger Vass '38 to Martha Parks Little '68. Joan Lawrence Rogers '49, Lucy Hamilton Lewis '68, and Marsha Knight-Orr '73 told the Millers of their own freshman experiences. Club President Mary Monroe McLoughlin '45 expressed each alumna's vicarious pleasure at seeing Anne Drue's excitement as she enters her first year at Agnes Scott."

Decatur

ALUMNAE FROM the Decatur area welcomed Dr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Perry, Jr., at the club's annual fall luncheon September 27 at Druid Hills Golf Club. A very large group of about seventy listened as campus events and developments were described by the president in his talk. Mrs. Perry gave the blessing. Assistant Director of Career Planning Libby Dowd Wood, Dean of Students Marty Kirkland, and members of the Alumnae Office staff were among the group present. Club President Mary Ben Wright Erwin '25 presided.

Evening (Metropolitan Atlanta)

THE EVENING CLUB began its new year of programs September 24 with Dr. Bill Weber of the economics department speaking on the importance of economics at Agnes Scott. With the Alumnae House's living room full and overflowing, President Susan Balch Clapham '75 led the meeting, and committees were formed for the club's annual book discussion in January, an ice cream social for seniors, and a financial seminar for students.

Muscle Shoals Area

A BEAUTIFUL AFTERNOON tea drew together alumnae from the northwest part of Alabama at the home of Mary Hollingsworth Hatfield '39 in Florence September 27. Co-hostess was Jane Kelly Watson '62. Katherine Akin '76, assistant to Agnes Scott's director of admissions, in Alabama to interview prospective students for the College, was honor guest and speaker. Illustrating her talk with a slide show, she presented "A Campus Update" for the alums and mothers of current students.

Kentuckiana Club holds annual picnic in July.

Kentuckiana

FOR THE THIRD summer alums and families of the Kentucky-Indiana border area gathered for fun and picnicking July 7. Anne Eyler Clodfelter '60 and husband Don hosted the event at their lakeside home in Brownstown, Ind. "Swimming, boating, water-skiing, and fishing made the day fly by," wrote Club President Edith Towers Davis '60. "Three members of the class of '60 — Anne, Edith and Mary Carrington Wilson Fox plus Mary Clayton Bryan DuBard '59 enjoyed reminiscing about shared experiences at Agnes Scott. Elaine Orr Wise '65 told about the changes when she attended five years later. Toward dusk the group sat on the dam and watched dirt track racing below. Everybody left tired and happy and looking forward to next year's outing." The club has invited Dr. Margaret Pepperdene as luncheon speaker next March.

New Orleans

HURRICANE BOB blew away plans for the mid-summer meeting of the New Orleans Club, planned for July 11 at the New Orleans Hilton. The storm hit the very day an alumnae luncheon was to bring together Regional Vice President Peggy Hooker Hartwein '53, New Orleans Club President Sarah Turner Ryan '36, Betty Brougner Campbell '43, Peggy Lamberson '78, Mary Elizabeth Barrett Alldredge '41, Mary Catherine Matthews Starr '37, Gail Nelson Blain '33, Noel Barnes Williams '51, Ruth VanDeman Walters '66, Mary Seagle Edelblut '42, and Evelyn Baty Landis '40. Alumnae Director Virginia Brown McKenzie '47 was already in town attending a conference and had planned a campus update for the group but cancelled the gathering as winds blew stronger. No bad alumnae damage or casualties except the luncheon.

Young Atlanta

THE YOUNG ATLANTA CLUB opened the year's programs with a very successful gathering September 11. Melissa Holt Vandiver '73, professional wardrobe consultant, gave an interesting and informative program entitled "Expressing Your Personal Style: how to dress well on a budget and still knock 'em dead." The group of about thirty-five met in Rich's auditorium at Lenox Square for Melissa's talk, demonstration, and practical tips.

Construction Is Her Special Field

MATHEMATICS OPENED the door to a career in teaching building construction management for University of Nebraska-Lincoln associate professor Eva Ann Pirkle Winter '40. Eva Ann is one of the few women educators in construction management nationally and the only one at UN-L. A mathematics and Latin major and Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Agnes Scott, Eva Ann received her master's in mathematics from Duke University in 1944. She leads a busy life as professor, advisor, author, wife, and mother and is the recipient of awards and honorary memberships.

Eva Ann returned to work in 1967, after a twenty-year absence, as math instructor at UN-L. In 1974 the university transferred and promoted her to the College of Engineering as an assistant professor in construction management. The move came when Eva Ann indicated she possessed the skills necessary to teach two of the construction management courses in computation and analysis. She had the mathematical skills and knowledge of the application of computers in the construction industry and of the construction industry itself. In 1977 Eva Ann was promoted to associate professor of construction management and given tenure.

She is faculty advisor to both the student chapters of the Society of Women Engineers and the Associated General Contractors of America. Eva Ann wrote Fortran for Construction, used by the construction management department as a textbook for a course required of all construction management and architecture majors. Also, she designed and developed the Construction Management Achievement Survey, a follow-up of graduates asking for information on kinds of jobs they hold, geographical locations, salary levels, additional education, etc.

The culmination of all this activity came in 1977 when Eva Ann received the undergraduate Teaching Award for the College of Engineering. These $1,000 awards, established in 1977 by the Nebraska State Legislature, encourage excellence in undergraduate teaching. The College of Engineering was authorized to present one award that year, and Eva Ann was the college's first recipient. Another indication of Eva Ann's skill and ability came when she was granted membership in the Society of Women Engineers, although she is not an engineer.

In addition to her regular teaching activities, Eva Ann actively participated in the instigation of a new and very successful workshop on careers in science for women. The 1977 workshop was financed and encouraged by UN-L's Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Engineering, and Agriculture. Eva Ann represented the College of Engineering on the planning committee. Based on the experience gained in this workshop, two members of the UN-L Graduate Women in Science applied for and received a National Science Foundation grant to conduct a workshop on the same topic in 1978. A planning committee was organized to implement the grant, and again Eva Ann served as the representative of the College of Engineering. In the 1978 workshop Eva Ann was responsible for securing the discussion leaders. There were twenty-six of these women, all recognized as leaders in their own areas of expertise. The workshop was an outstanding success with over 200 students attending. A discussion panel was videotaped by the University of Nebraska's educational television station, and the program has been aired repeatedly.

Never idle, Eva Ann is presently working on a new course she'll begin teaching in the spring of 1980—a survey of data management systems as related to the construction industry. To get information on the "state of the art" among Nebraska contractors who are members of Associated General Contractors, Eva Ann will conduct a survey to determine what use Nebraska contractors currently are making of computers and what uses they anticipate or would be interested in in the future.

Eva Ann's honorary memberships include Sigma Lambda Chi, national scholastic honor society for construction; Tau Sigma Delta, national honor society for architecture and allied arts; and Sigma Xi, national science honor society of which she is an associate member. She will be listed in the 1980 (Fifth) edition of World Who's Who of Women, published in Cambridge, England.

Alumnae Association President Joins National Work Force

*By Cissie Spiro Aidinoff '51
President, Alumnae Association*

BACK TO WORK. How many times have those of us who were once professionally employed dreamed of or even thought about going back to work at a full-time, nine-to-five, paying job?

We all remember the fun, the glamour, the glory, and the excitement. We may even still remember the challenges and the exhilarating feeling of a job well done. We may still see the people at the other desks and remember the thrill of handling a complex problem or of meeting a nearly impossible publication deadline. Clearly, we remember the paychecks and even some of the things on which we spent those paychecks.

Two months ago, I received that long-thought-about phone call. "Come to work," the voice said. The job was to be terrific, the people exceptional, and the work challenging. In the beginning, the hours would be flexible, and I could set up the structure of the organization as I considered most effective.

Who could turn down such terms? I couldn't; so on Monday, November 26, 1979, I became the Executive Director of the New York Citizen's Committee for the Democratic National Convention.

During the past three weeks, I have been busy! My flexible hours are more than nine to five. I have been to twenty-seven meetings and have written ninety-six letters. I have made and received dozens of phone calls and have been able to leave the office for lunch only three or four times. I have begun to draw up specific projects and programs and have hired my staff and some of our consultants. I have also begun to realize what is truly involved in going back to work.

I have learned that I must get out of bed an hour and a half earlier each day to organize my house and my life. No more leisurely reading of the New York Times over my second cup of tea in the morning; I scan the headlines for political news and hope that I am not too tired to "read" the paper at the end of the day. I cannot hear the fascinating lectures and speeches which are available on almost every day of the week at one or another of New York's finest institutions. No more matinees or opera rehearsals. No more twice-a-week tennis, and absolutely no more of those long, talky lunches with friends who have just done this or read that. And most importantly, no more board meetings. I have already missed two International Center board meetings where notes were taken and decisions made which substantially affected the work of the Center and its funding for its foreign student programs for the coming year.

Why then have I taken this job? Why am I working? Why have I given up my comfortable (and rewarding) life style for the problems of approximately 6,000 delegates, 2,500 alternates, hundreds of foreign dignitaries, and scores of press and accompanying persons at a political convention?

Well, I'm not absolutely sure; and as there are two vice presidents from a major international corporation waiting to discuss with me what their company can do for the convention, and as I have an ad agency representative who wants the Committee's business due in my office in fifteen minutes, and as I have on my phone "hold" button the person with the greatest souvenir ever that he wants me to buy and distribute to all delegates, I just don't have the time to figure out why I have done this. How can I tell you why I have put myself in this wild situation? I guess in my heart I really do know why. It's fun; I work extremely hard, and the job is most rewarding. There is a great deal of excitement, and, not insignificantly, I am expecting my first paycheck at the end of this week. These things are all part of going back to work, and I love it.

THE MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT at Agnes Scott offers a curriculum which has three fundamental purposes: to serve all students in a liberal arts environment, to give mathematics majors a solid background for more advanced study, and to help students develop skills and acquire mathematical tools which will be beneficial in the marketplace. The statement:

The curriculum in the Department of Mathematics is designed to help students to think clearly and logically, to analyze problems, to understand and be able to use the language, theory, and techniques of mathematics, and to develop skills and acquire mathematical tools needed in the applications of mathematics, which appears in the mathematics section of the 1979-1980 catalog, is itself new, but the ideas it represents are not. In so far as I know, that has been the design of the department's curriculum for many years. It is true that there have been some changes from time to time but basically the curriculum is a core curriculum and not subject to numerous changes.

The following is a list of courses in the curriculum at the present time. The number in parentheses after a course indicates the year in which it was added to the curriculum. The courses with no number in parentheses were offered in some form in the 1958-59 session. In many of them there have been changes in the level, the title, the number of credit hours, the emphasis, or even the content to some extent.

- 101. Finite Mathematics (1965)

- 121. Introductory Calculus, Analytic Geometry II
- 150. Introduction to Computer Programming (1969)
- 201. Differential and Integral Calculus
- 301. Fundamentals of Real Analysis (1967)

Sara Ripy, department chairman, specializes in classical analysis.

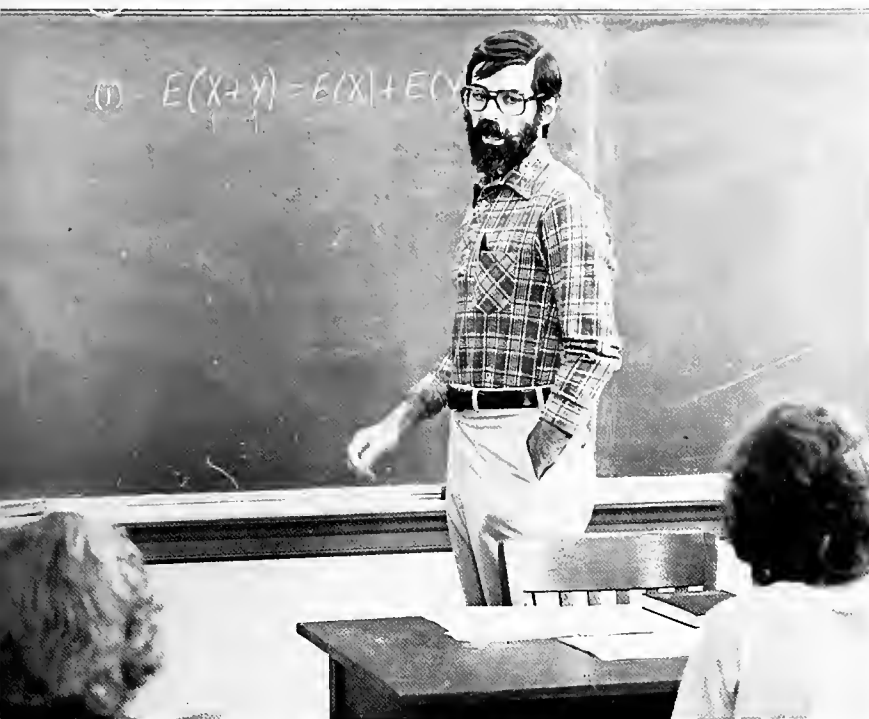

- 307. Linear Algebra
- 309. Differential Equations
- 310. Advanced Calculus
- 312. Introduction to Numerical Analysis
- 314. Introduction to Modern Geometry
- 315. Topology (1962)
- 321. Introduction to Modern Abstract Algebra (1959)
- 322. Modern Abstract Algebra (1959)
- 328. Mathematical Statistics and Probability
- 345. Topics in Mathematics (1974)
- 352. Theory of Functions of a Complex Variable
- 410. Special Study
- 411. Mathematics Seminar (offered 1968-71, dropped, and added again in 1978)
- 490. Independent Study

Even though the above listing is complete, perhaps a few comments are appropriate. In 1958 the basic course was college algebra and trigonometry.

Elementary analysis (now 120, 121) was added in 1959. Gradually it became the basic course. College algebra and trigonometry was dropped in 1965 and finite mathematics was added. The major upper level course changes have been the additions of abstract algebra in 1959, topology in 1962, and fundamentals of real analysis in 1967. Mathematics 345 enables us to enlarge the curriculum without the commitment demanded by the normal addition of a course. One course offered as a topic, Mathematical Models and Applications, will be added to our curriculum next year. Other topics that have been or will be offered are number theory, Boolean algebra, calculus on manifolds, and game theory. A course in the history of mathematics will be added next year. Mathematics 410 and Mathematics 490 offer the student the opportunity to do independent study in an area of interest to her. More structure for the major was approved in 1972. The specific requirements for the major at the present time are 201, 301, 307, 321, one of 310, 315, 352, and one of 309, 312, 328, with a minimum of forty-five credit hours and a maximum of seventy-two credit hours. Next year the seminar will be required for the major.

During the decade of the sixties one hundred and sixty-six students graduated from Agnes Scott with a major in mathematics. During the decade of the seventies there were seventy-six.

Our majors have adequate preparation for graduate study. In recent years majors have been accepted for graduate work in mathematics at such universities as Clemson, Colorado State, Duke, Emory, Texas, and Vanderbilt.

The department has maintained a traditional liberal arts approach to the study of mathematics and has not succumbed to the increasing demands for strictly career-oriented courses. It is true that mathematics is a practical major as well as an intellectually sound and stimulating one. Also it is true that employers do appreciate the skills which are developed in studying mathematics. Courses such as statistics and probability, computer programming, and numerical analysis provide the student with mathematical tools which are useful in many professions. Recent majors have been employed by corporations such as IBM, International Harvester, Southern Bell, and Westinghouse. Other mathematics majors have completed M.B.A. programs. Still others have become teachers and/or administrators at the elementary level, at the secondary level, and at the college level.

In 1975 a dual degree program in engineering with Georgia Tech was established. Later the joint program was extended to include information and computer science, industrial management, and management science. A participant in the program attends Agnes Scott for three years and Georgia Tech for two. Upon the completion of her work, she receives the B.A. degree from Agnes Scott and also a bachelor's degree from Georgia Tech. The engineering student takes mathematics through linear algebra and differential equations. One student (a mathematics major here) has completed the program and two students are studying at Tech now. A number of our present students have indicated an interest in the program. And last year the faculty approved an interdepartmental major in mathematics-physics.

Majors in disciplines such as chemistry, economics, physics, physics-astronomy, and sociology are required to take certain mathematics courses. Mathematics 101, 115, 120, 121, 150, and 328 are courses which may be taken as part of the Preparatory Program for Business. The dual degree program, the business prep program, and majors in other disciplines are not under the direction of the mathematics department; nonetheless, the mathematics courses included in each are a concern of the department. They must be considered in planning our curriculum.

The department believes that mathematics is a basic component of the liberal arts and that a knowledge of mathematics is a valuable possession. Besides possessing intrinsic beauty and value, higher mathematics is indispensable to a genuine understanding of much of man's intellectual achievement. Its study is challenging and can be very rewarding. It serves as the common language of the sciences, even the social sciences to an increasing extent. Morris Kline puts it this way:

Mathematics is a model of exact reasoning, an absorbing challenge to the mind, an esthetic experience for creators and some students, a nightmarish experience to other students, and an outlet for the egotistic display of mental power. But historically, intellectually, and practically, mathematics is primarily man's finest creation for the investigation of nature. The major concepts, broad methods, and even specific theorems have been derived from the study of nature; and mathematics is valuable largely because of its contributions to the understanding and mastery of the physical world. These contributions are numerous.¹

Mathematics is not static. All one needs to do to get some indication of the current areas of research activity in the discipline is to look at a recent issue of the Mathematical Reviews. In 1965 Robert Gunning and Hugo Rossi wrote:

Mathematics has been expanding in all directions at a fabulous rate during the past half century. New fields have emerged, the diffusion into other disciplines has proceeded apace, and our knowledge of the classical areas has grown ever more profound. At the same time, one of the most striking trends in modern mathematics is the constantly increasing interrelationship between its various branches. Thus the present-day students of mathematics are faced with an immense mountain of material. In addition to the traditional areas of mathematics as presented in the traditional manner—and these presentations do abound—there are the new and often enlightening ways of looking at these traditional areas, and also the vast new areas teeming with potentialities. Much of this new material is scattered indigestibly throughout the research journals, and frequently coherently organized only in the minds or unpublished notes of the working mathematicians. And students desperately need to learn more and more of this material.²

mathematics department at the University of the South, visited our campus as a mathematics consultant. This service was provided at our request by the Mathematical Association of America. At that particular time it seemed most appropriate to have the department examined impartially with special attention given to the curriculum and recommendations made for a replacement for Mr. Wilde. Ron Wilde (M.A.T., Duke University) taught in the department from 1965 until his retirement in 1978.

The members of the department at the present time are Robert Leslie (Ph.D., University of Georgia), who came in 1970; Albert Sheffer, Jr., (Ph.D., Rice University), who came in 1976; Donald Young (Ph.D., University of Virginia), who came last year; and Sara Ripy (Ph.D., University of Kentucky), who came in 1958.

No update of the mathematics department at Agnes Scott would be complete without a word of acknowledgement, appreciation, and gratitude to Leslie Gaylord (M.S., University of Chicago) and Henry Robinson (Ph.D., The Johns Hopkins University). Miss Gaylord came to Agnes Scott in 1921 and retired in 1968. "Dr. Rob" came in 1926 and retired in 1970. They each made significant contributions to the department and to the College. Those of us in the department now are indebted to them. ▲

Women and the Freedom to Achieve

By Ayse Ilgaz-Carden '66

WHILE I WAS A STUDENT at Agnes Scott, I can remember sitting in one of those chairs on a number of occasions and listening to a speaker. Quite often I would not be just listening but carrying on a silent dialogue with the speaker. The essence of my contribution to the dialogue was, "If you would just let me tell you what's important, significant, and relevant. . . ." And here I am, and believe me, one part of me is extremely happy for a dream come true. But there is another part of me—the part that I try to discourage and keep under lid and cover, the part that would give anything to be sitting with you down there and carrying on a silent conversation with the speaker. My psychologist colleagues would tell me that this is only a reflection of the conflict and anxiety I must feel over achievement. Being a woman, I am supposed to be more prone to that kind of thing. That is what I want to talk to you about today: women and whether we are free to achieve. I do not think that I need to apologize for my topic to the male members of my audience; after all, I am going to talk about your daughters, wives, friends, mothers, or students.

In 1968 Matina Horner reported the results of her research which led her to theorize a motive to avoid success among women. Since then the study of achievement-related conflicts has attracted a great deal of attention and generated considerable controversy. The theorized motive and the findings of the relevant studies have been dissected many times, from a variety of view points, and revisions have been introduced both by the original author and others. One finding, however, has remained relatively consistent through these years, consistent even in the context of changing definitions of and attitudes toward success and the increasing impact of the women's equality movement: the finding that women continue to display indications of a motive to avoid success and behave in ways consistent with the existence of such a motive significantly more frequently than men. Reviewing some of these findings recently Horner concluded that young men and women still tend to evaluate themselves and to behave in ways consistent with the dominant stereotype that says competition, independence, competence, intellectual achievement, and leadership reflect positively on mental health and masculinity but are basically inconsistent or in conflict with femininity. Thus, despite the fact that we have a culture and an educational system that ostensibly encourage and prepare men and women identically for careers, the data indicate that social and, even more importantly, internal psychological barriers rooted in this image really limit the opportunities to men (Horner, 1975, p.207).

Dr. Ayse Ilgaz-Carden
Assistant Professor of Psychology

The kinds of activities we choose to engage in and our eventual level of competence in these activities are in great measure determined by our expectations. There are many studies which indicate that men in general have higher expectations of success than women. According to Frieze, this is true

"Not only in clearly defined masculine tasks and apparently 'sexless' intellectual tasks, but also, in some cases, for feminine tasks" (Frieze, 1975, p.161). One implication of such findings for women is clear: they will seek activities traditionally consistent with the female role since expectations of success will be highest and achievement motivation will be untainted by anxiety. In fact, we know that this is happening on a grand scale all over the country. Alexander Astin, in his study of the impact of college experience on the American youth concludes that "Perhaps the most important factor influencing career outcomes is sex" (Astin, 1978, p.159). According to his findings,

Men and women differ considerably in their educational and their intellectual development during the undergraduate years. Although women earn higher grades than men, they are less likely to persist in college and to enroll in graduate or professional school. Moreover, women's aspirations for higher degrees decline, while men's aspirations increase during the undergraduate years. Compared with men, women are more likely to acquire general cultural knowledge and skills in foreign languages, music, typing, and homemaking (Astin, 1978, p.129).

What about our judgments as to why we experience success or failure? To what factors do we attribute our successes and failures? Although research results are not very conclusive about certain aspects of the attribution question, a relatively stable pattern of sex differences can still be detected (Frieze, 1975). In general, men are more likely to interpret their successes in terms of their ability. Women, on the other hand, more readily see external factors, such as luck, as being instrumental in their success. Causes of failure experiences also appear to be interpreted differently by men and women although in the case of women findings are not as clear cut. Men tend to see lack of effort as a frequent cause of failure while women are as likely to see lack of ability or presence of adverse external conditions as possible causes of their failure. The implications of these findings are very important, especially in understanding what happens after success or failure. As one would predict, men are more likely to continue working toward achievement in the face of failure because it was lack of effort on their part which caused the failure to begin with. It is an internal quality which they can control. What about women after failure? They are much less likely to continue because, after all, how can they affect the lack of ability or identify and deal with adverse external conditions? They do not fare any better with success experiences, either. While men see success in terms of their ability, their continued success experiences will enhance their self-esteem and add to the security and stability with which they approach similar experiences. Since women, however, do not see an internal stable characteristic such as ability as the cause of success, when they succeed, they need not experience increased motivation to approach similar experiences or have increased self-esteem as a result of success. These different expectations and perceived reasons for success and failure will continue to flourish in the fertile milieu of sexual stereotypes and the absence of appropriate role models.

"To stereotype," according to Elliot Aronson, "is to assign identical characteristics to any person in a group regardless of the actual variation among members of that group" (Aronson, 1976, p.175). Thus, if to be a woman is to be "nice," gentle, dependent, expressive, impulsive, emotional, passive, and "not-too-numerically-inclined" and to be a man is to be independent, aggressive, competent, dominant, and unemotional, and these expectations are directed to a person because of the person's sex, they will have a limiting effect on the choices available to that person. In this sense, stereotypes are detrimental to the potentially rich growth process of the individual because of the limitations they place on the availability of choices and rigidity they impose on possible roles.

As Aronson points out,

The notion of sex roles appropriate to sex identity, is quite useful in understanding the pressures that society places on both men and women. The most striking feature differentiating male and female sex roles is the greater diversity of acceptable role behaviors available to men and the lack of such choice and diversity for women (Aronson, 1976, p.183).

Rosenthal's now famous research into the phenomenon of "self-fulfilling prophecy" reaffirms how powerful these societal expectations can be in shaping our cognitive and emotional behavior (Rosenthal, 1968).

Behind the usually subtle pressures of stereotypes we can still see various forms of active discrimination. Higher admission requirements for women practiced by certain colleges, even some state colleges, higher availability of job opportunities to men, more exacting standards applied to women in hiring practices as well as in subsequent on-the-job performance evaluations, and unequal salaries are all easily documented areas of possibly diminishing but nevertheless continuing discrimination. One of Alexander Astin's recent findings relates to this last area of discrimination. Concerning beginning salaries in teaching, which is traditionally considered to be a more or less feminine profession, Astin reports that "Even after background factors such as interests, high school and college grades, and fields of study are considered, men earn better than $1000 more in salary than women" (Astin, 1978, p.159).

Fewer Support Systems

The picture that emerges indicates that women in fact have every right to feel anxious in the face of possible achievement since it is realistic to assume that they will be achieving in a less supportive environment both in subtle and overt ways. This recognition leads Irene Frieze to conclude that achieving women must be professionally better than men in order to experience any career success. Furthermore, they perform at this high level without many of the environmental supports that professional men frequently have. These supports which are unavailable for women include the many services of the wife and general societal recognition and support for achievement (Frieze, 1975, p.166).

Role Models Needed

The absence of appropriate role models serves to compound the effects of the stereotypes on women's orientation toward achievement. How can a young girl aspire to achieve in professions where there are no or only a few females? How can she have very good feelings about competence and achievement when almost all the role models demonstrating these qualities in the textbooks she reads and the movies she sees are depicted to be men? The importance of the availability of role models is clearly seen in the results of a number of recent studies investigating the backgrounds of high-achieving women. As we would expect, these women quite often have highly educated mothers who provide the much needed role models for them. In cases where the mother is not a professional herself, she is very likely to be a person who believes in the values of achievement and competence and actively tries to inculcate these values in her daughters. According to Birnbaum's findings, for example, this is a mother who is recalled as having been a somewhat attractive, dominant, and very competitive woman who often worked outside the home and yet also was perceived as somewhat dependent on and very close to her husband. In many ways, she sounds like an ideal role-innovative model, a competitive, work-oriented woman of considerable energy and independence who is also comfortable with closeness or dependency (Birnbaum, 1975, p.409).

In this respect, the role of fathers and husbands is also of great interest. Women who show high achievement orientation most often report having fathers who are high achievers themselves and both by role modeling and by active encouragement support their daughters' achievement strivings. The support of husbands is also crucial. Again, according to the results of the Birnbaum study, most achieving women have extremely supportive husbands who view marriage in terms of mutual enrichment and friendship and are proud of their wives' accomplishments. This is attested to informally by the personal communications of many of our own Return To College women as well as a number of the female members of the Agnes Scott faculty, among whom this speaker is very happily included.

The modeling and support of family members, however important, are not sufficient to free the female to achieve. The variety, quantity, and quality of the female role models which the greater society provides are also significant factors. As the number of women in high achievement roles increases and they are recognized and supported in these roles by both men and women, achievement motivation will begin to be freed from conflicts originating from sex roles and will be, for men and women alike, merely "an internalized standard of excellence, motivating the individual to do well in any achievement oriented situation involving intelligence and leadership ability" (Horner, 1969).

What can be done to help women to be free to achieve? Irene Frieze suggests the institution of programs designed to directly affect expectations and causal attributions of women. The teaching of the consistency of femaleness and achievement, in terms of actual success experiences and active role modeling, would be at the core of such programs.

Helping women have more confidence in their abilities would benefit both traditional and career-oriented women since it would provide them with a better basis upon which to determine the most appropriate life style for themselves (Frieze, 1975, p.168).

I suggest that there are already existing programs in the country which incorporate these essential elements in the encouragement of women toward achievement and, judging by the outcome, they are doing a very effective job. I am referring to women's colleges.

Impact of College Years

In 1978, Alexander Astin published his book, Four Critical Years, in which he presented the major findings from the first ten years of a highly comprehensive longitudinal research project conducted jointly by the University of California and the American Council on Education in Washington. The research was designed to study the impact of the college experience on the American youth and included more than 300 colleges and universities of all types and collected data on more than 200,000 students. Among the many findings concerning the impact of college experience there was one finding which was, according to Astin, highly "dramatic" and quite unexpected: single sex colleges were found to have almost uniformly positive effects on their graduates. This finding is made even more significant by the fact that, again according to Astin, "only a handful of those institutions that were single-sex in the early 1960s have been able to resist the temptation to become coeducational through the late 1970s" (Astin, 1978, p. 246).

Value of Women's Colleges

Virtually all of the findings concerning the effect of women's colleges on their students are positive and involve dimensions which further achievement in women. For example, these colleges were found to increase involvement in academic pursuits among their students, increasing both the likelihood of completion of the degree and the aspirations to higher degrees. The students attained higher levels of intellectual self-esteem compared to students from coeducational institutions. This esteem was readily manifested, for example, in higher levels of verbal assertiveness in the classroom.

Furthermore, these students reported a great deal of satisfaction with the college experience which allowed them active participation and greater involvement in campus life. They reported great satisfaction with the fact that they could attain positions of leadership and be actively involved in roles instrumental in the actual running of the college.

Another source of satisfaction involved their close interactions with the faculty and the quality of student friendships. These are significant findings and show, in fact, that in terms of the teaching of achievement values, these colleges are doing a highly effective job of providing motivation, active support, experience, and modeling. In these times when the quality of the education process at all levels is under criticism, even the secretary of HEW, Mrs. Patricia Harris, must have been impressed indeed by these findings. September 24 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education reports her quoting Astin's findings in a meeting on September 18 in Washington, attended also by our own president, where she pledged active support of women's colleges. This would have been very good news indeed to Margaret Mead, the famous anthropologist, who many years ago experienced many of the realities that Astin's research revealed in 1978. In Blackberry Winter, reminiscing about her early years in college, she writes:

in the setting of this coeducational college (DePauw) it became perfectly clear both that bright girls could do better than bright boys and that they would suffer for it. This made me feel that coeducation was thoroughly unattractive. I neither wanted to do bad work in order to make myself attractive to boys nor did I want them to dislike me for doing good work. It seemed to me that it would be much simpler to go to a girls' college where one could work as hard as one pleased (Mead, 1972, p.100).

At a later page, she continues:

By the very contrast it provided, DePauw clarified my picture of the kind of college at which I wanted to be a student—a place where people were intellectually stirred and excited by ideas, where people stayed up all night talking about things that mattered, where one would meet one's peers and, still more important, people with different and superior minds, and not least, where one would find out what one could do in life (p.101).

In the fall of 1920 she came to a women's college, Barnard College,

Where I found—and in some measure created—the kind of student life that matched my earlier dreams. In the course of those three undergraduate years friendships were founded that have endured a lifetime of change, and by the end of those years I knew what I could do in life (p. 102).

I hope that Agnes Scott is as good to you. It was to me. ▲

With the Clubs

Atlanta

SUCH AN OVERFLOW crowd of alums and friends turned out October 18 to hear President Marvin B. Perry, Jr., at the Piedmont Driving Club that the number of tables outgrew the room for which the luncheon was planned and had to be moved to the ballroom. Classes from many decades were represented. Atlanta Club President Jane Taylor White '42 presided, and Frances Ellis Wayt '42 introduced the speaker. Margaret Shepherd Yates '45 was luncheon chairman. Dr. Perry assured his listeners that the College has maintained its high academic standing and that S.A.T. scores of entering freshmen are far above national scores and are above those of recent classes, whereas the national trend is down this year. He told alumnae they could help Agnes Scott by remaining the active, well-informed and supportive group they are; by mentioning the College with pride and helping to publicize her name; by helping locate outstanding prospective students; by helping find job opportunities for graduates; and by continuing to contribute "your hard-earned dollars." He said he has found alumnae to be "tremendously interested, loyal, and generous."

Cobb County

CAREER PLANNING Director Kathleen Mooney's talk October 20 at the Cobb County Club's coffee brought forth a lively discussion and many questions from alumnae about the work of her office and how it could help them as well as current students. The speaker reported that she herself "had a really good time" and enjoyed the exchange of ideas with alums, some of whom plan follow-up visits to the campus. Many of them shared reasons for choosing their occupations and told of special memories of Agnes Scott days. "It was a warm gathering of friends," wrote Club President Florrie Fleming Corley '54, "and likely friends—from as far away as Cumming, Ga." A special story by Susan Aikman Miles '68, club secretary and a columnist for the Marietta Daily Journal, featured Kathy's message and Agnes Scott's career planning program.

Susan and her fellow-columnist and fellow-alum, Nancy Dendy Ryle '49, were co-hostesses at Nancy's home.

Decatur

AN IMPRESSIVE planetarium demonstration by Director Julius Staal on the Christmas star plus a fascinating commentary and showing by Dr. Bob Hyde of slides from his wondrous collection of pictures of the universe enthralled Decatur Club members who visited Bradley Observatory on campus December 6. Coffee was served in the "back room" amidst Christmas greens and berries, and the rainy day interfered with festivities not a bit. Observatory Director Hyde and Mr. Staal offered another program for alumnae, faculty, staff and friends of the College December 18.

The new film room in Buttrick, elegantly carpeted and furnished, was the setting for the club's October 25th program by Dr. Michael Brown, professor of history. The room was filled nearly to capacity, as members and friends crowded in to enjoy Dr. Brown's colorful photographs of gardens and famous buildings in England taken during "Alumnae Travels in England," trips on which many in the audience had accompanied the speaker.

Delaware Valley

DR. ART BOWLING, assistant professor of physics, gave his popular talk on "Black Holes in Space" for alumnae of the Philadelphia area October 27. His listeners were delighted, and Program Chairman Nancy Boothe Higgins '61 wrote afterwards, "He has opened my eyes to a body of information I knew so little about. Everywhere I read now I am recognizing some point he made. He is a great asset to the College." Dr. Bowling reported on his return to campus that the alums in the Philadelphia area were very enthusiastic over prospects of steering students towards Agnes Scott and were pleased to hear about the new honors scholarships being offered.

Fairfield-Westchester

PARTY RESPONSIBILITY in the changing structure of political life in the U.S. was the topic of discussion by Dr. Gus Cochran, assistant professor of political science, at a September 29 luncheon in Cos Cob, Conn., at the home of Sister Davis Luchsinger '48. A congenial group of alums enjoyed his stimulating talk and then joined in a spirited discussion reflecting their "sincere involvement in the political affairs of their communities and the country," wrote Club President Martha Stowell Rhodes '50. Dr. Cochran is on sabbatical at Boston College this year but has continued to speak to alumnae groups. He wrote that he enjoyed visiting with the Fairfield-Westchester area alums and that "it was good to see a little bit of Agnes Scott a long way from home."

MICHAEL BROWN of the history department and Director of Alumnae Affairs Virginia Brown McKenzie '47 drove up from the campus to Gainesville, Ga., for a delightful luncheon meeting of North Georgia alumnae at the home of Bess Sheppard Poole '45 September 27. Dr. Brown gave his presentation of "Alumnae Travels in England." President Becky Deal Geiger '57 presided, and Donna Reed Newell '72 was program chairman.

Houston

CLUB PRESIDENT Barbara Faris Gram '76 wrote enthusiastically about a party for prospective students at the home of Elizabeth Heaton Mullino '35 the weekend of October 19 planned by the College's alumnae admissions representatives in the Houston area. The AARs included Mary Margaret McMillan Coleman '70, Fran Amsler Nichol '73, Melody Snider Porter '78, and Sybil Corbett Riddle '52.

Middle Tennessee

A SUNNY AUTUMN day set the scene for a gathering of alums in the Nashville area October 20 at the home of Ann Shires Penuel '57. Although it was primarily a social occasion, the brunch provided a chance for the large group present to hear a campus update by Director of Alumnae Affairs Virginia Brown McKenzie '47, who flew up that morning for a quick visit. "It was a really nice surprise to have Virginia with us!" wrote the outgoing club president, Anne Hoover Gulley '55, "and our whole brunch was very successful." Incoming officers are Terri J. Hiers '72, president; Emasue Alford Vereen '58, vice president; and Marcia McMurray '72, secretary-treasurer.

New Orleans

A LOVELY MORNING coffee at the home of Club President Sarah Turner Ryan '36 brought together about twenty-five alumnae October 30 for a pleasant visit and a campus update. Director of Admissions Judy Maguire Tindel '73, Director of Financial Aid Bonnie Brown

Johnson '70, and Director of Alumnae Affairs Virginia Brown McKenzie '47, spoke of how the group could help the College and described changes which have taken place on campus. The New Orleans group has one of the oldest alumnae club scholarships established for Agnes Scott.

New York

NATIONAL ALUMNAE President Cissie Spiro Aidinoff '51 was hostess at her apartment overlooking Central Park October 11 at an elegant luncheon for New York alums and an alumnae group touring Manhattan. Dr. and Mrs. Marvin B. Perry, Jr., were special guests. President Perry brought news from the campus to the group at Cissie's, which numbered around fifty. Alexandra Coclin '76 is president of the New York Alumnae Club and was one of the local alums who joined the travelers for the Broadway play Evita and a dinner party at the Cosmopolitan Club the following night. Former Alumnae President Marybeth Little Weston '48 also took part in some of the events.

Winston-Salem

THE MANY alums and friends who heard Dr. Margaret Pepperdene discuss poetry and liberal arts at their Winston-Salem luncheon September 29 were enthusiastic in their praise of the program, which one called "the best thing I ever heard." A large group attended the meeting of the recently organized club, which is making splendid progress under the leadership of Anne Pollard Withers '61. Mrs. Pepperdene herself reported she had "a glorious time and came back laden with apples and pumpkin bread."

First Honor Scholars Weekend Held

By Mary K. Owen Jarboe '68

ON FEBRUARY 14-16, 1980, thirty-five outstanding high school seniors visited the Agnes Scott campus as finalists in the first Agnes Scott Honor Scholars competition. The new no-need awards have been established to recognize superior academic achievement and leadership and are being offered for the first time to freshmen entering in September 1980. Students selected as Honor Scholars will receive $2500 awards which are renewable based upon successful college performance. Honor scholars who have financial need above the $2500 awards will have that need met through the Agnes Scott Financial Aid Program. In establishing the Honor Scholars Awards, the Board of Trustees stated that new money was to be raised to fund the program so that the need-based aid program would not be affected in any way.

In order to be eligible for the competition, students had to be accepted applicants for admission with superior high school records and Scholastic Aptitude Test scores of at least 600 on both the verbal and mathematics sections. The thirty-five finalists were chosen from a large group of students who entered the competition. The finalists came to the campus from eleven states. In addition to their outstanding academic records, the students selected as finalists presented evidence of involvement in various ways in their schools, churches, and communities. Many are active in student government, musical groups, service clubs, and athletics. Their interest areas are diverse, but a number commented on interests in science and mathematics.

During Honor Scholars Weekend, each finalist spent fifteen minutes with an interview panel composed of Professors Bowling, Brown, Pepperdene, Pinka, Tumblin, Wistrand; President Perry; Dean Gary; Dean Kirkland; Director of Admissions Judy Maguire Tindel '73; and alumnae Jane King Allen '59, Marian Franklin

Honor Scholars finalists met with four department chairmen.

Anderson '40, and Joyce McKee '75. The interviews were interesting and rewarding for the panel members, and the finalists were able to learn more about the College through these sessions. Personal interests as well as current events were discussed with the finalists.

In addition to the interview sessions, the finalists attended a dinner at the Atlanta Historical Society on Thursday night with members of the interview panel, the admissions staff, and the director of financial aid. Lawrence and Mary Duckworth Gellerstedt '46 also attended the dinner as trustees of the College. Before the dinner, everyone enjoyed seeing an exhibit on women in Atlanta's history which featured a number of articles from Agnes Scott. A question and answer session was held after the dinner.

On Friday, the students visited classes of their choice, met with faculty members, and participated in the interview sessions. Friday evening, the finalists attended either the Atlanta Symphony or the Alliance Theatre. Finalists stayed in the dormitories Thursday and Friday nights with student hostesses. All of these activities were planned with the idea of giving the finalists an opportunity to learn about the academic program, student life, and the many opportunities available to Agnes Scott students in Atlanta.

Based upon comments from the finalists, interview panel members, faculty, and current students, the first Honor Scholars Weekend appears to have been quite successful. It is hoped that a number of the thirty-five finalists will be students at Agnes Scott in September. The names of the Agnes Scott Honor Scholars will be released after May 1. ▲

The Department of

By Dr. Ronald Byrnside

Professor Ronald Byrnside, chairman, earned his doctorate at the University of Illinois.

THERE IS no evidence that man has any physiological need for it, yet in the most remote corners of civilization and in the most distant reaches of history it seems that man has everywhere and always had music. Since he doesn't need it, but has always had it, one must conclude that music is very important to man. It is, in fact, one of man's self-created treasures. This idea is at the core of the philosophy that guides and animates music instruction at Agnes Scott College. Music is more than a discipline, but it is a discipline — a humanistic discipline, and one that is a central part of a truly liberal education.

Our curriculum in music is designed to be rich and diverse enough to accommodate the special needs of both music majors and non-majors. The department currently offers nineteen different courses in music theory, history and appreciation, and applied music instruction in voice, piano, organ, harpsichord, flute, clarinet, bassoon, violin and 'cello. Beginning next year, qualified students will be accepted into the newly created program in music education.

One of the biggest changes in the make-up of the music department over the past few years has been the growth of instrumental music. A string quartet, a woodwind quintet, and a baroque/classical ensemble are now active on campus. Several members of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra have joined our part-time faculty to help meet these new demands in instrumental applied music. The College now owns a single manual Burton harpsichord which is used for ensemble and solo purposes. The instrument was built from a kit in the summer of 1976 by our own Professor Theodore Mathews.

The Atlanta Chamber Players, now in its fourth year of residency at Agnes Scott, has enjoyed wide critical acclaim and was recently awarded a much coveted grant from the Paul Chamber

Music

Music Foundation of New York. Harold Schonberg, music critic of the New York Times, had high praise for the ACP, listing them first in a list of distinguished regional chamber music ensembles. In addition to formal concerts the group regularly offers a series of open rehearsals to which our students and the public are invited.

Jean Lemonds is the newest member of our full-time music faculty. Professor Lemonds has appeared as recitalist at numerous colleges in the Southeast and at several Atlanta churches. She is also director of the Agnes Scott Opera Workshop which very successfully produced Menotti's The Telephone and Barab's A game of Chance in February. As part-time accompanist, Sandra Barnes works closely with Professor Lemonds and also with many students of applied music, since she regularly accompanies many of them at quarterly applied music juries.

Professor Raymond Martin joined the faculty in 1950. In addition to his duties as College organist, Professor Martin teaches organ, harpsichord, music theory, and various courses in the history and practice of church music. Last year Professor Martin completed a term as an officer in the American Guild of Organists. He also directs the Organ Guild at Agnes Scott and is coordinator of student recitals on campus.

Professor Ronald Byrnside, chairman, is a member of the Council of the American Musicological Society, a consultant to the National Endowment for the Humanities, and lecturer in the winter series cosponsored by the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and the High Museum of Art. He is the author of two books and scholarly articles on a variety of musicological topics.

Professor Theodore Mathews continues his good work with the Agnes Scott Glee Club, a group that regularly provides enthusiastically received programs on and off campus. In May Professor Raymond Martin received his S.M.D. from Union Theological Seminary (New York).

Assistant Professor Jay Fuller studied at the Johns Hopkins University, Peabody Conservatory of Music.

The Department of Music

1979 the Glee Club appeared with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Holst's The Planets. During the past Thanksgiving/Christmas recess, the Glee Club enjoyed a highly successful tour of England and Russia. Professor Mathews also teaches music theory and is the architect of the new music education certification program.

Professor Jay Fuller, recently returned to us from a richly-deserved sabbatical (1978/79), is presently the president of the Decatur Music Teachers' Association. Professor Fuller's gentle ways, intensely musical attitudes, and solo recitals continue to serve the College and her aspiring pianists in indispensable ways.

Ultimately the worth and value of the College and her several departments must be measured by the quality of her graduates. We are particularly proud of this year's graduating music majors. Of the nine music majors in the Class of 1980, four will go on to do graduate work, two are teaching privately and playing in their community orchestras, and one will pursue a career as a composer/performer in the field of contemporary church music.

Every one of these students gave a formal senior recital. Attempting to perfect one's musical abilities with skill, intelligence, and sensitivity is a very demanding and time-consuming undertaking. These students have accepted the challenge, paid the price, and have met with no little success.

What is of overriding importance and what makes these students special is that their musical studies and accomplishments were pursued and achieved within the larger context of a first class liberal arts education. Two of these students were double majors in music and math, one was a double major in music and classics, one in music and chemistry, one in music and French and one in music and history. Four were members of Mortar Board; Kemper Hatfield (pianist) was president of the Student Government Association, and Jenny Spencer (cellist and organist) was president of Honor Court.

The Nannette Hopkins Music Scholarship program (begun in 1976/77) has been a positive force in attracting to the campus students who are academically solid and musically gifted. We urge you, the alumnae, to bring this program to the attention of gifted high school seniors in your area and to help us as we endeavor to find the very best students for Agnes Scott College. We hope you will visit the campus soon and often, and when you do, please stop by to say hello to us in Presser Hall. ▲

ASC's Good Will Ambassadors

By Dottie Enslow '80

"Do you have your passport?" "How many travelers' checks do you have left?" "Can we stop at the beriozka shop again?" "Where's Oz?" "Where is that fish and chips shop?" "What time is breakfast tomorrow?" With these and many other questions, the Agnes Scott College Glee Club Tour Group set out to enjoy themselves in "Merrie Olde London Towne" and the unfamiliar territories of Leningrad and Moscow in the Soviet Union.

Thanks to family, friends, school and alumnae support, President Perry's help and the revised calendar which provided a longer Christmas break, the England-Russia concert tour finally happened after three years of involved planning. The group of Glee Club veterans, Andrea Helms of the Public Relations Office, and Glee Club director Ted Mathews and his family finally got underway on November 26, 1979, from the Atlanta Airport. The direct Delta flight was exciting, but not half as thrilling as the landing at London's Gatwick and the scenic drive into London to disembark at our new home, the Ivanhoe Hotel.

Under the auspices of our beloved courier, Oz, the next two weeks were a whirlwind of early breakfasts, short, hurried rehearsals, concerts, and lots of shopping and sightseeing. The first three days in London involved a concert at the Ernest Bevin School, a bus sightseeing tour of all the high spots (London Bridge, the Tower, Big Ben, Buckingham Palace, and Trafalgar Square), another concert at Oxford Polytechnic, a walking tour of the colleges of Oxford (New College, Merton College, Christ Church, and all of their beautiful chapels and quadrangles), plus enough time left over for dinners on the town, pub visits, shopping on Oxford and Regent Streets, and, of course, theatre visits. Annie and Eva were two favorites.

This non-stop pace had a slight respite when we left London for Russia. Waiting in Heathrow Airport, we experienced the proverbial Aeroflot delay: "Have eighty pence worth of light refreshments" wait. But it was worth it when we finally arrived in Leningrad at midnight to greet Irina, our guide, sleepy customs officials, and the first snowfall of the year. If we thought the pace in London was fast, in Russia we did double-time. In Leningrad we visited the Hermitage, the Opera, the Revolution Museum, the Revolution Cruiser "Aurora," the Peter and Paul Fortress (where all the czars are buried), the Piskarouskoye Cemetery (for Leningrad's 600,000 who died during World War II), as well as any and all beriozka shops, the foreign currency souvenir store, being always on the lookout for china tea sets. We sang one concert at the Leningrad Music College, but we always returned to our Hotel Kievski for bony fish and ninety-cent Pepsis.

The sleeper train which took us to Moscow was a highlight. Moscow was fascinating, and our hotel, with a view of the Olympic Stadium, was extremely modern. The group gave two concerts, one at an International Students' Club and the other at the Moscow Music Institute. Between these concerts, we had a tour of Moscow which included the Kremlin, Red Square, Lenin's Tomb (with his embalmed body on display), the Tretyakov Museum, several stops on the elaborate and immaculate Metro, the Exhibition of Economic Achievements, featuring a space exploration hall, and, of course, the beriozka shops again. Everyone agreed that Russia was interesting, but the bitter cold winds, beet salads, and constant bony fish dishes were gladly left behind on our return to London.

The afternoon of our return saw us visiting the State Apartments of Windsor Castle. The next day was free, so everyone went out until the group met to go see Ira Levin's Deathtrap that evening. Our final concert abroad was at Richmond Parish Church on Sunday morning with a farewell party for Oz that afternoon. Our terms as goodwill ambassadors were over, but everyone looked forward to January back at Agnes Scott to share our pictures and memories of this once-in-a-lifetime trip. ▲

As the Terror Began in Iran

By Willa Wagner Beach '49

IN APRIL of 1974 my husband accepted a job with Bell Helicopter International in Tehran, Iran. Never having been the adventurous type, I wasn't exactly enthusiastic. For the first four months I was the classic example of a culture shock victim. However, after a language course, which included instructions in history, customs, and Ta'rof, their politeness code, I threw off my fears, began to ride city buses and taxis, and was able to go around town for shopping and social visits with enjoyment. The Iranians were more than friendly. One of my earliest and nicest memories is of an old man stopping me on the street and presenting me with a rose. Once, while we were sightseeing in the nearby mountains, we came upon some workers having their lunch. Nothing would do but that we join them to share their tea, barbari bread, and onions. No matter the language barrier; just all smiles, hospitality, and delight when we uttered a few words in Farsi, the Persian language, even badly pronounced. They were eager to help us correct our pronunciation. Our syntax was beyond even their help.

The two questions most often asked of me on my return have been: "What was housekeeping like over there?" and "What else did you do with your time?" Housekeeping was very much the same for us as Stateside except that I spent more time in the kitchen. Absence of convenience foods meant back to the old do-it-yourself recipes. All fresh vegetables, fruits, and eggs were first washed, then soaked in Clorox or other disinfectant. Just getting the groceries was the biggest problem. I walked much more than any other time in my life. Eventually, we bought a car, but I would not drive in their undisciplined traffic. All neighborhoods had small kuche (alley) stores and there were some supermarkets loosely patterned on ours here. As time went on, more and more imported European and American products began to appear on the shelves.

Nice to have, if you didn't mind paying two dollars for a can of Campbell's tomato soup! I have many fond memories of our little kuche store. My trying to ask for things in Farsi, with my southern accent, often got blank stares, smiles, and a shrug. When all else failed, I pointed.

Helping run Bell's Thrift Shop and participating in the activities of the American Women's Club kept me quite busy. The AWC had many interest and activity groups: bridge, bowling, skiing, geology, archaeology, gemology, and travel, to name a few. Every other year the AWC ran a Charity Christmas Bazaar for the benefit of the Iranian orphanage. It was such a large undertaking that we began work on the crafts and projects in June.

My social life was never dull: visiting friends, entertaining at home, or dining out in the many good restaurants. There were three theaters which occasionally showed foreign language films. Of the three television channels, two were in Farsi, natural or dubbed, the other was in a foreign language, usually English. The Farsi channels would often simulcast the original on FM radio, so we could have two-language stereo!

Like all large metropolitan areas, Tehran had its problems with power outages. We kept candles and our naft (kerosene) lantern always ready. The stores did a brisk business in flashlights, batteries, and gas lanterns. In the summer of '78, as unrest began with strikes and demonstrations against the Shah, we were never sure if power failures were due to poor maintenance or deliberate cuts by protesting workers. As the power could be off up to twenty-four hours, we became frugal about going into the refrigerator or freezer. Many a time our ancient Philco did an unplanned and messy defrost. In October, during a time of planned, nightly, power cuts, we began to be serenaded by Iranians out on their flat rooftops chanting "Allah Akbar" and "Death to the Shah." We thought it an impressive demonstration of their piety and anger until we noticed that when the electricity came back on, they all vanished downstairs to their television sets.

Willa visits the tomb of poet Saadi in Shiraz.

As riots and demonstrations increased, the foreign language news broadcasts became heavily censored, then curtailed. We began to listen to short wave BBC, VOA, and Radio Moscow news programs. It was the only way to discover what had happened that day, as even the Farsi news broadcasts were more rumor than fact. The American Embassy issued daily bulletins advising which areas of town to stay away from and always admonished, "Keep a low profile." The constant use of that phrase made all of us groan, for we felt that if our profile got any lower we'd have to go underground.

As riots and strikes increased, so did shortages of consumer goods, especially bottled gas for cooking, gasoline, heating oil, and kerosene. We became apprehensive about using our cooking gas bottle and began to cook only one meal a day. Many people, foreign and Iranian, wanted to leave; but there were no commercial flights, and trains and buses were not running. Driving to the border would have been almost impossible; no gasoline enroute, brigands on the road, thieves and religious fanatics attacked some cars and trucks. Even if we had reached the border, the customs men would not have processed our exit papers. So, we kept a low profile and ventured out of our apartments only into the immediate neighborhood.

In mid-January the Shah left the country. For a week everyone relaxed and life went back to almost normal. However, the provisional government proved useless and the revolutionary factions couldn't agree among themselves, except they all agreed, "Yankee, go home." When the official word from the company came, I had less than two weeks to sell the apartment furnishings, pack and try to ship our personal possessions, pack for travel, then move into the Hilton Hotel to be processed out. We spent only one night in the hotel, one night which became the most frightening of any I had spent since the troubles began. I had heard the stories of room searches, money and valuables taken, windows being shot out as a few loyalists and the revolutionaries clashed over control of the nearby radio station; but nobody had told me that the hotel grounds were the fire-base! The place was an armed encampment. We couldn't turn around without bumping into a very young Khomeini guard amateurishly fondling his rifle. One guard managed to tear-gas the lobby, just playing around with the canister!

Bedtime started with a bomb scare. Everyone in the lobby was turned outside, everyone else told to stay in his room. Happily, there was no bomb. About 2 a.m., right under my second-story window, the nightly "fire drill" started. No one ever knew the real reason for these firings, but it is difficult to sleep through machine gun chatter and carbine firings. I got very little sleep.

At 5 a.m. we loaded onto buses and were escorted to the airport. After seemingly endless hours of standing in line, thorough search of our single permitted suitcase, passport check, identification check and recheck, we were allowed to leave. Pan American Airways "Freedom Flight 6" lifted off at 2:30 p.m. January 19, 1979. Shouts and tears released our emotions. Farewell, Iran.

Iran is a country of extremes: ancient and modern, very rich, very poor, with a middle class just beginning to emerge. I saw many evidences of the good that the Shah was trying to accomplish in education, welfare, medicine, technology, and transportation. Khomeini appears bent on destroying these progressive steps and turning the clock back to medieval times. I am saddened to see the turmoil and unrest where, for almost five years, we were happily at home. It is frightening to realize the global repercussions. ▲

Growing Pains for Abu Dhabi

By Mariana Guion Mabry '64

ABU DHABI, land of mystery, oil, sand, frustration, and progress? Certainly the last four — and perhaps a bit of the first. Abu Dhabi is the largest, and, because of its extensive oil resources, the most important of the seven former Trucial States which make up the United Arab Emirates (U. A. E.). The U.A.E. was established December 2, 1971, a federation of Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharjah, Ajman, Umm al Quawain, Ras al Khaimah, and Fujairah. The ruler of Abu Dhabi, HH Sheik Zayed bin Sultan al Nahyan, is the president of the U.A.E., and HH Sheik Rashid bin Saeed al-Maktoum, ruler of Dubai, is the vice president. He and the rulers of the other Emirates make up the Supreme Council of Rulers.

The U.A.E. is thus a relatively new voice in the Middle East, and has so far tended to follow the lead of Saudi Arabia in the areas of politics and oil pricing. Sheik Zayed, relatively conservative in his outlook and determined to use the country's one limited resource wisely, has nonetheless authorized a tremendous amount of expenditure in his effort to develop Abu Dhabi for his citizens' benefit. The per capita income of Abu Dhabi may be the highest in the world, for although the population of Abu Dhabi has been estimated at more than 200,000, the native population probably numbers less than 50,000.

As is to be expected in a land which has only one shot at prosperity, there is a variety of laws designed to protect the interests of the Abu Dhabians and to ensure that whatever commercial interests are developed, the nationals benefit from all ventures. For example, no foreigners may own land or buildings; none may come to Abu Dhabi without a local sponsor, and, thus, no business may be established without an Abu Dhabi citizen participating as majority partner. Since there is no provision for naturalization, this means a native-born Abu Dhabian.

If these terms seem stringently self-protective, it should be noted that Abu Dhabi has nothing but the oil beneath its sands, and whatever the laws, Abu Dhabi is inundated with foreigners making money hand over fist, with hundreds more waiting for a sponsor in order to come in and cash in on the riches. Many schools have been built, perhaps more than can ever be needed, and health services are free at the local hospital and maternity clinics, although most Westerners seem to prefer the better-established hospital at Dubai for any serious illness. Low-cost and free housing has been made available to encourage the nomads to live in the town, and Sheik Zayed has a policy of giving houses to nationals to be rented to foreigners as a source of income.

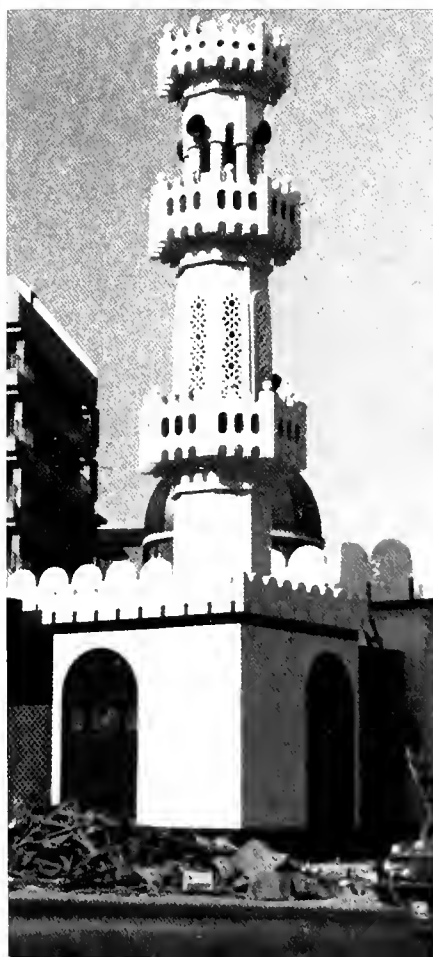

Although there is a cadre of educated Abu Dhabians who serve at the higher echelons of the government agencies and various businesses, one does not see many native Abu Dhabians in daily life. The menial work is done mainly by the Baluchis, while the Arabs from other Middle Eastern countries, in addition to the vast numbers of Indians, Palestinians, and Lebanese, fill most of the clerical and shop positions. The work force is thus swelled by over 100,000 of these people who have flocked to Abu Dhabi because they can earn more there than in their own countries.

Of the seven Emirates, only Dubai, an important Arab trading port for centuries, was in any sense developed before the discovery of oil. Abu Dhabi was little more than a patch of desert, with the town of Abu Dhabi, a small fishing village perched on an island close to the mainland. The oil revenues, which began to flow in the mid-1960s, have brought the town leaping into the twentieth century. In its rapid push toward urban and social development, Abu Dhabi has become a boom town, with the attendant inevitable problems. Construction is rampant, and since there is a great deal of "get-rich-quick-itis," buildings are going up as rapidly and cheaply as possible. Construction is almost exclusively of cement blocks, and the cement is most often made with salty sand, leading to cracks and leaks in the newest of structures. Houses, apartments, office buildings, and hotel rooms are inadequate for the masses of people flooding into the country from all over the world.

One's introduction to Abu Dhabi, after the bleak drive from the airport into town on Airport Road, is typically unpredictable. Does one still have the hotel room that was booked? Can one keep it until a house is available? To say that hotel space is at a premium is a gross understatement. The government "reserves" 60 percent of all hotel space on a permanent basis. The companies operating in Abu Dhabi pay to "reserve" a room or two for their incoming personnel. All of these rooms, however, are constantly filled, and if the government decides to preempt them, one either finds lodging with friends or one leaves the country.

We were in a hotel for almost four months, from October 1975 to early February 1976, waiting to find a house with access to water and electricity, and we were exceedingly fortunate to keep our room when the annual December celebration of the establishment of the U.A.E. brought hundreds of government guests to Abu Dhabi. The cost to the firm for this extended stay at the hotel for our family of four was over $24,000.

After a three-month search, we found an empty house, with a city water main running close by, and electricity already installed. It took almost another month to find out who was responsible for renting it and to get the lease signed. The lease called for a two-year rental period at 80,000 dirham ($1 equaled approximately 4 dirham) per year. Lease notwithstanding, when the second year's rent was due, the owners asked for 140,000 dirham, and a compromise of 100,000 dirham was reached after lengthy negotiations. We knew several families in the same area who were forced to leave because they could not or would not meet the huge annual increase in rent.

The housing complex where we lived presents an interesting example of Abu Dhabi expediency. There were about thirty houses built in this particular area. Some months prior to our arrival, Sheik Zayed had needed space to house a number of his guests. Twelve of these houses were completely furnished on a crash basis with wall-to-wall carpeting, drapes, water, electricity, air conditioning, telephones, and all appliances and furniture to accommodate the visiting dignitaries, who stayed for several weeks. At the end of their stay, Sheik Zayed ordered the houses stripped of all furnishings and appliances, and the now-empty houses were given, one each, to a native Abu Dhabi family to rent as a source of income. As our house was one of the twelve, we were able to move in with a minimum of difficulty by Abu Dhabi standards. Nonetheless, we still had to have a pipe connecting the house to the main water line, a water tank added to the roof, and an electric pump installed to pump the water to the roof tank in order to have water for use in the house.

Planted and well-tended roundabout and new construction

This water was orange in color because of the rusty pipes, and due to the flimsy nature of the tank coverings, could not be considered sanitary. We bought expensive bottled water for drinking and cooking.

Daily life for Westerners in Abu Dhabi was a blend of near-idyllic living with a myriad of continual frustrations. Our children attended the French School, which began at 8:00 a.m. and finished at 1:00 p.m., due to the intense heat in the afternoons. Since these hours meshed nicely with my husband's working hours (8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.; 4:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m.), we were able to enjoy a long lunch together, often with a family swim at the Club. The Club was originally established by the British but had been opened for membership to all nationalities by the time we arrived in Abu Dhabi. Since it was the only facility of its kind in Abu Dhabi, sporting a lovely beach and sailing facilities, a swimming pool, two cement squash courts, two tennis courts, a billiard room and a very good restaurant, the waiting lists for membership were long, and it often took more than a year to be considered for membership.

With their shortened school hours, our children had plenty of time to finish their homework and play before dinner. There was not much adult entertainment in Abu Dhabi, so one's friends, always invaluable, took on an added importance. There were only about a half-dozen restaurants to choose from, and apart from the Club, or dancing or bowling at the Hilton, one would join friends in the evening for dinner, bridge, or conversation. The movie theaters were usually too crowded to be comfortable, but there was a good selection of films, and many people had television sets which provided a limited number of programs in English. Almost all types of consumer goods were available in Abu Dhabi if one could locate them and could afford to pay prices which were generally exorbitant.

What tended to make life in Abu Dhabi difficult for Westerners were the problems encountered in getting what elsewhere would be considered as routine tasks accomplished. If power or water failed, there was no one to call. One simply waited until it was restored. Appliances were sold without guarantees, so if an appliance failed, which they did with annoying frequency, one could buy a new one, but there was little or no hope of having it repaired. We were not allowed to test drive our new car, and when we got it, we discovered a cracked window (hidden by a dealership sticker), a speedometer which didn't work, a gas gauge which didn't register, and the radio, tape deck, and air-conditioning inoperative.

Obviously, not all difficulties encountered were as troublesome as the above. We learned to deal with lice (horrors!) and sunburn, and found that we had a great deal of leisure to develop friendships and a variety of projects and hobbies. If this article seems to present a somewhat mixed attitude to life in a foreign country, it may reflect fairly accurately my feelings after two years in Abu Dhabi. It was an interesting experience, as any such adventure must be, and the memories are on the whole pleasant or, at least in retrospect, amusing. Perhaps, one should not ask for more. ▲

Alumna Marries Turk, Adopts New Culture

By Letitia Moye Unver '61

A 1961 GRADUATE of Agnes Scott, I met my Turkish husband in America when he came to study for a master's degree. In 1965 we returned to Turkey and taught in a boys high school in Tarsus, an ancient town in the south. Later we moved to Ankara, the modern capital located on the central Anatolian Plateau. My husband has been involved with a private development foundation: working in rural areas with a chicken project near Tarsus, a dairy project in Diyarbakir in far eastern Turkey, and improvement of bee keeping in the Ankara region. I taught English several years and have two sons, twelve and eight. Not working full-time recently has given me time to enjoy my boys and take part in various activities related to the development foundation.

Actually, daily living takes more and more energy. This past winter has been colder than usual with snow most of January, and our apartment has had no fuel oil for three separate periods of weeks. We stayed warm with a small coal and wood stove in the living room. Electricity has also been cut off almost every morning from 8:30 to 12:30.

Our condominium in a building with eight other families is typical of Ankara housing, there being almost no suburbs and single family dwellings. Of necessity I speak Turkish now with my neighbors and when shopping. My boys are bilingual and attend a private school where math and science courses are taught in English.

Excellent seasonal fresh fruits and vegetables, yogurt and lamb are among the staples in our diet; as yet, frozen foods haven't reached us. These staples take a lot of preparation as well, but a maid once a week helps with the heavy cleaning.

Letitia's Husband, Altan Zeki, Writes:

THE INCREASE in oil prices on the international market hit Turkey very hard because the country has to import about 80 percent of its oil; but Turkey does not have enough foreign exchange to pay for the oil imports—the total of its annual exports of goods and services will not be enough for the oil imports alone. The result has been acute shortage of gasoline and fuel oil. Curtailing of other imports has created stagnation in the industry, thereby creating unemployment. Prices have been soaring. Recently, the prime minister warned about three digit inflation, instead of just two digit inflation—that is, inflation that has been running close to 80 percent annually may soon go over 100 percent.

The political situation is not very comfortable either. Considerable tension and conflict exists between the extreme right and left wing political factions. The situation is further complicated by the endless divisions and factions within the left. Political violence and assassinations are quite frequent; both between the left and right wing groups, and also within the left.

Basically, Turkey is still a working democracy, mildly left of the center government which was voted in with the 1977 elections. However, when the economy and the political violence did not improve, the voters in the 1979 elections brought in a more conservative government. Situated next to Iran, and not too far from Pakistan and other trouble spots in the Middle East, and with a long border with the Soviet Union, Turkey's geographic location and political position are certainly both critical and significant. ▲

She Calls Istanbul Home

By Betsy Boatwright Goksel '62

Betsy and youngest daughter

"GO TO IRELAND and dig peat!" was Dr. Hayes' advice as I wavered, or rather stagnated, among classmates who were either discussing the very new Pill in preparation for June weddings or G.R.E. results in preparation for graduate school. Ireland and Turkey in 1962 seemingly had nothing in common, not even the terrorism that besieges them both today, but "Kismet" or Fate led me to The American College for Girls in Istanbul, a division of Robert College at that time. Kismet was helped along by Dr. Hayes, who had taught at Robert College from 1921 to 1925; Dr. Catherine Sims, a former Agnes Scott history professor who was the dean of the Girls' College; and İpek Aksugur, a graduate of the Girls' College and member of the class of '63 at Agnes Scott. I accepted the job with no idea of my salary and only a vague notion of where Turkey was. Ahead of me were two years of adventure before having to make serious, life-binding decisions in an unknown, mysterious country far from home.

The two years have extended to eighteen years, the "serious life-binding decisions" having been made here after meeting a young Turkish military officer at an International Work Camps meeting shortly after my arrival in Turkey. Istanbul is now my very familiar home, yet in many ways Turkey remains unknown and mysterious.

The Girls' School, where I continue to teach, has merged with its counterpart and is now Robert College, a coed junior and senior high school consisting of bright, highly-selected Turkish students, many of whom continue their education in the United States. Its campus is an oasis of green and beauty in a rapidly sprawling city.

My three daughters—Tuba, Dilâre, and Diba Nigâr—are both bilingual and bicultural, celebrating with equal enthusiasm Turkish national holidays and the holidays and traditions that I hold dear.

The haunting call of the muezzins awakens me in the morning to red streaks of dawn silhouetting the gentle Asian hills, the sparkling Bosphorus with its ferryboats and colorful fishing boats continues to thrill me, and the street sellers with their wares of yogurt, vegetables, or pots and pans create an exciting, oriental scene.

Yet in many other ways, both subtly and obviously, the Turkish scene has changed over the years. Now interspersed among the street sellers are soldiers with machine guns. Each day the newspapers bring dread, fear, and desperation into Turkish homes as the number of deaths from anarchy increases and inflation soars. Many necessities—coffee, margarine, toilet paper, gasoline, and fuel oil, to list a few—are unavailable, and depression is hard to fight off, as schools close for lack of heat, and businesses stop production. Turkey's economy, as well as its internal peace, is at its lowest ebb since the founding of the Republic in 1923.

As a foreigner in Turkey I have enjoyed the privilege of being forgiven for foolishnesses (such as rolling in the grass with my children) or social slights that a Turkish lady would never commit. I have been respected as a teacher, an honored profession in Turkey. I have felt fear, not as a foreigner but as a human being caught in the anarchy that rages here. I have never felt hostility aimed at me because of being American, though perhaps my marriage to a Turk and my relative fluency in Turkish has helped to counteract this. I have felt a coolness, even antagonism, towards the United States as a power, beginning around 1965 and continuing now with great resentment because of the arms' embargo. However, this antagonism is very rarely extended to a personal level, and tourists are usually surprised and warmed by the hospitality and kindness of the Turks.

I must state that my knowledge of Turkey is limited to Istanbul. The attitudes in Istanbul, the center of culture and industry, are not representative of all of Turkey. In some areas the Anatolian Turk is more hospitable and helpful, while in others he is more intolerant. Turkey is a large and varied country, from the sophistication and westernization of Istanbul to the remote backward villages of the East, isolated by lack of roads, education, medical care, communication; from the overwhelming beauty of the Mediterranean coast to the bare plateaus of Central Anatolia. Today the country is being torn apart by various factors—religious, nationalistic, and political. I have identified myself with this country, so rich in history, natural beauty, and human values, and I hope, as we all do, that the future will bring a settlement of the many troubled areas. ▲

Draft Registration: Yes and No

By Gina Philips '81

"WOMEN IN the Military—Should They Be Drafted?" and "Women in Combat—Closer than You Think" are recent articles from Newsweek and U.S. News and World Report, respectively. These articles have provided information used in my formulating an argument against drafting women. The arguments for and against have proven to be valid and evenly matched. The question no longer pertains to draft registration but to the expansion of women's employment in combat-related jobs or actual combat. President Carter has assured us that breaking the 204 years of military tradition will "not be a move away from an all volunteer force but simply a time-saving measure to help mobilize troops in case of an emergency." The U.S. News article clearly points out that women in combat follows closely at the heels of accepting women for the draft. In conjunction with this reality, it is imperative that one sees the argument against the draft from political, economical, and, most importantly, sociological points of view.

Politically, Congress is split on the debate. Those opposed question the advantage of drafting women, excluding any combat-related jobs. Volunteers already cover non-combat military jobs, and there is an excess of volunteers.

Presently, no woman is stationed closer than fifteen miles from a combat area. One Congressman concludes that instigating the women draft excluding all combat-related jobs defeats the purpose and becomes a mere gesture.

Economically, one can look at the employment percentages of women in the military today without the draft. The percentage of volunteers is expected to increase from an 8 percent portion of the total military to a 12 percent portion by 1985, and the overall portion of men is expected to drop by 25 percent by the 1990s as the percentage of women increases. With this increase of women in the military service is an increase of military pregnancies. It is calculated that of the 14 percent of women pregnant during the year, 8 percent are pregnant at one time, but even more astounding is the fact that one-half of the pregnancies are to unwed mothers. Issues of abortion, child support, and parental

I OPPOSE selective slavery for anyone, male or female. However, since there is no avoiding the fact that President Carter is seeking from Congress the authority to register women for non-combat military service, we should now attempt to determine what advantage, if any, there may be in the registration of women.

The question of whether or not women should be required to join their male friends and relatives in filling out registration forms at their local post offices is probably the most inflammable fuel to feed the pro-ERA fires in quite some time. The 150,000 women currently serving in the all-volunteer armed forces have proved that the incorporation of women in the military is not the far-fetched notion it was once thought to be. As Carter acknowledged in his February 8 statement, "There is no distinction possible, on the basis of ability or performance, that would allow me to exclude women from an obligation to register." Furthermore, the principle of equal rights means equal obligations, including the obligation of possible mandatory military duty. Carter himself further stated, "In every area of our national life, women are meeting the responsibilities of citizenship . . . Just as we are asking women to assume additional responsibilities, it is more urgent than ever that the women in America have full and equal rights under the Constitution. Equal obligations deserve equal rights."

Unfortunately, "full and equal rights under the Constitution" is still not a reality. It is with this fact in mind that some women are bitterly retorting, "We meet the responsibilities, but where are the accompanying rights and privileges? Why should we be called upon to defend a constitution in which we are not even included? No ERA, no registration, no draft." Their indignation is justifiable. Required draft registration is a slap in the face to the women who have fought long and hard for a guarantee of equal rights under the Constitution.

Yet, properly wielded, the registration of women for the draft could be a powerful tool for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. It would be hypocritical of our feminist friends to demand equal rights in every facet of American society on the one hand, but, faced with the prospect of required

Art for All the Children, by Frances E. Anderson '63. Charles C. Thomas, Springfield, Illinois. $18.75.

Reprinted with permission from National Art Education Association Newsletter, July, 1979.

Art for All the Children was created out of desperate need for literature that integrates the concepts of special education with those of art education and developmental psychology, and it speaks to those needs with a clarity, organizational logic, and thoroughness that is refreshing and comforting.

One of the particularly valuable aspects of this book is its reliance upon discoveries made about learning specific to diverse handicapped conditions. The author's definitions of various impairments form a social, intellectual, and physical profile that is most helpful for identification purposes. She cautions the reader that while description is necessary for understanding, labeling and categorizing special children can aggravate feelings of stigmatization. The profiles provided include the learning disabled, behaviorally disordered, hearing impaired, mentally retarded, visually impaired, and physically handicapped. She then explores the issues of evaluation and assessment, the success or failure of an activity being dependent upon the criteria for judging the merits of an art experience. Since this book is designed to help parents as well as art teachers and therapists, the author does not assume the reader's fluency with development theory and presents a distilled summary of the stages of children's artistic development with a helpful breakdown of behaviors in a checklist of age-appropriate skills.

This book is a welcome addition to the growing literature addressing art activities for impaired children. It belongs on the bookshelves of college libraries, on the desks of art educators, art therapists, recreation therapists, and parents. Dvora Krueger

Tennessee Taproots by Paul and Sophie Montgomery Crane '40. Earle-Shields Publishers, Old Hickory, Tennessee. $9.95.

THIS book of discovery is the first to bring together all ninety-five county courthouses of Tennessee, with color pictures of each one. A symbol of the county, each courthouse reflects the economic activity, civic pride, and the health of local government. The county courthouse system is a basic building block of democracy in America and is still the place at which the ordinary citizen meets his government.

Primarily a picture book, Tennessee Taproots presents each courthouse as it looked in 1976. Each is an example of the style of architecture in public buildings at the time it was built. A table, giving the construction dates, shows the architectural history of the courthouse and the changing styles.

The book presents three types of information: factual information, which may be readily available but has not, in recent years, been compiled in one volume; information that deals specifically with the courthouse itself; and points of interest, significant happenings, and famous personalities of each county.

The factual information gives the date of the founding of the county, the origin of the name of the county and the county seat, the land area in square miles, the principle rivers which drain the county, and the population figures as reported in the U.S. census reports of 1850, 1900, and 1970. Each county is ranked by population in the state.

The courthouse information includes the number of courthouses built in each county with the dates, cost, and the names of architects and builders where they could be found. Noteworthy trials and special events involving the courthouses are listed.

Under "points of interest" are listed various items which highlight each county.

My Body, My Health: The Concerned Woman's Guide to Gynecology by Felicia Guest '66, Felicia Stewart, M.D., Gary Stewart, M.D., and Robert Hatcher, M.D. John Wiley and Sons, New York, New York. $6.95.

My Body, My Health was written because women and their doctors are now making health care decisions together. Women who read My Body, My Health will find the thorough, up-to-date information they need to make informed decisions on everything from birth control to major surgery.

Written by two gynecologists and two family planning experts, My Body, My Health is a comprehensive, unbiased, readable, illustrated guidebook for women of all ages. It avoids the pitfalls of obsolete data, paternally reassuring attitudes, limited viewpoints, and political overtones. The book covers forty-one major topics, including breast and pelvic examinations, early signs of pregnancy, methods of birth control, decision-making about unplanned pregnancies, abortions, sterilization operations for both men and women, reproductive tract infection, and menopause. More than 130 illustrations, along with practical checklists and actual case histories, illuminate the text.

Designed as a standard reference, My Body, My Health will be updated regularly as new information becomes available. A professional edition of the book, which includes additional information for clinicians, has been published also.

Atlanta

WINTER PROGRAMS for the Atlanta Club have included "New Roles of Women," presented by Dr. Connie Jones, assistant professor of sociology, at the home of Flake Patman Jokl '44 in November; "Liberal Arts in a Business Career," by Dr. William Weber, associate professor of economics, at the home of Christie Theriot Woodfin '68 in January; and a visit to the campus for the College Founder's Day celebration in February. Succeeding Jane Taylor White '42 as president of the Atlanta group is Frances Ellis Wayt '42, who has been program chairman. Serving with her will be Frances Steele Garrett '37, first vice president; Gail Savage Glover '66, second vice president; Nell Floyd Hall '51, secretary; and Martha Davis Rosselot '58, treasurer.

Augusta

DR. CAROLINE DILLMAN's talk on "Southern Culture in Transition" was "most interesting," reported the club president, Linda Todd McCall '59, after the luncheon meeting March 1 at the Augusta Country Club. "and our members were very responsive." The sociology professor and her husband, Fred, drove down for the occasion and combined her speaking engagement with a little family research, for Dr. Dillman herself has "roots" in the area. Incoming officers for the Augusta Alumnae Club are Susan Bell Bohler '73, president; Carol Jensen Rychley '69, vice president; and Patsy Rankin Jopling '69, treasurer.

Barrow, Gwinnett, Newton

BGN ALUMS returned to the campus February 16 for a look at the miniature reproduction of Solomon's temple in Rebekah Reception Room and a talk by Dr. Paul Garber, professor of Bible emeritus, whose research was behind the model's creation. Among guests in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Morris S.

Hale, Jr., of Atlanta, who later wrote to the Alumnae Office expressing appreciation for the "informative and well-presented" talk and praise for the club's entire meeting. Following an introductory prayer by Elizabeth Cash Gilmer '28, Club President Julia Kennedy '60 presented a check for $150 from the club to the College for use in Alumnae Association work and invited members to stay for lunch in Evans Dining Hall.

Birmingham

DR. CONSTANCE SHAW's slide presentation of the "Student Trip to Spain" for the Birmingham Club February 16 was both "entertaining and informative," according to reports from President Mary Anne Murphy Hornbuckle '69 and Vice President Pam Coffey '74. The Spanish professor, who heads the department at ASC, said she had "a lovely time" and would have liked visiting with the alums even longer. The group met at the home of Cissie Harris Anderson '62 for a "delightful luncheon, for which everyone brought her favorite dish. We enjoyed the change from meeting in a restaurant—we were far more comfortable and able to talk to friends," said the officers. Serving with Mary Anne and Pam are Virginia Finney Bugg '66, secretary; Betty Young vonHerrmann '69, treasurer; and Carol Sharman Ringland '70, career liaison person.

Central Florida

ORLANDO AREA alums were so enthusiastic about the talk and pictures on "Agnes Scott—Summer in Marburg" given at their March 1 luncheon meeting by Dr. Günther Bicknese, chairman of the German department, that they now hope he will plan a similar trip for alumnae. The Central Florida Club's meeting was at Dubsdread Country Club in Orlando, with President Melba Cronenberg Bassett '59 presiding. Vice President Mary Ann Gregory Dean '63 took Dr. Bicknese for an afternoon tour of the city. The professor said he had "a great time" on the whole trip to Florida.

Charleston

"IT NEVER SNOWS in Charleston," but it surely did the weekend Dr. Ayse Ilgaz-Carden '66 and her husband, John, drove over for a visit to the Charleston Club. "Women and Success" was the title of the psychology professor's talk to alums at a luncheon March 1 at the Colony House. Everyone was so enthusiastic over the talk and interested in the subject that the meeting lasted into late afternoon. Then the snow came. The Cardens were snow-bound at their inn until Monday morning, when the highway patrol finally opened one lane of the interstate. Safely home, Dr. Carden described the weekend as "a fantastic experience"—in more ways than one. The Charleston steering committee is headed by Allyn Smoak Bruce '68.

Charlotte

DR. MICHAEL BROWN, professor of history, and his wife, Lee, drove to Charlotte February 23 for a presentation of his beautiful slides of "Alumnae Trips to England" for the club's Founder's Day luncheon at the Myers Park Country Club. An early social hour drew together a large group, visiting with the Browns and each other. Club President Resa L. Harris '73 and Secretary Helen DeWitt '75 reported that the program was "a tremendous success," enjoyed by some fifty alums. Incoming officers are Sarah Petty Dagenhart '55, president; Judy Hamilton Grubbs '73, vice president; Kathy Fitch Piette '78, secretary; and Fran Woodward Clark '72, treasurer.

Cobb County

"MARY BONEY SHEATS captivated us with her masterful overview of women in the Bible," wrote President Florrie Fleming Corley '54 after Dr. Sheats spoke at the Cobb County Club Founder's Day luncheon February 23 at the Morrill House Restaurant in Marietta, Ga. "Many had further questions for her afterwards." Dr. Sheats told the group to "read the Scriptures with open eyes" — that the Bible is more balanced towards male and female than is generally thought. Academy Graduate Bertha Hudson Whitaker, now eighty-seven, was present with her sister, Ruby Baker, and brought her 1907-08 College Bulletin. Bertha went to Agnes Scott on the street car from Marietta and has wonderful tales to tell.

Columbia

ALUMS IN the Columbia area are among the latest groups to enjoy Dr. Edward McNair's popular "Anecdotes of Agnes Scott." The English professor and director of public relations emeritus flew to South Carolina February 23 for the club's Founder's Day luncheon at Hudson's, a historic home turned restaurant. Club President Jackie Rountree Andrews '57 sent an enthusiastic report of the day and commented, "Dr. McNair is such a delight; everyone loved him. The whole occasion was a special treat, and no one seemed to want to leave." Helen Wright Smith '24 brought her book of "Songs of Agnes Scott — 1922," and several Agnes Scott yearbooks and club scrapbooks were on display. The club voted to present a book to the College library in memory of Mildred Derieux Gantt '47, "a faithful member for many years." Incoming officers are: Judy Hill Calhoun '73, president; Margie Richardson '73, secretary; and Dr. Christina Yates Parr '47, treasurer.

Dallas, Fort Worth

DR. TED MATHEWS, who headed a group of Glee Club students touring and performing in England and Russia this winter, flew to Dallas and gave a slide presentation of the trip for Texas alums. A large group thoroughly enjoyed his program, and the music professor reported "a great time" himself. The spring luncheon was at Pittman House in Dallas.

Decatur

FOUNDER'S DAY this year included the lavish morning coffee at which the Decatur Club entertained in Rebekah Reception Room preceding the Convocation talk by Dr. Edgar F. Shannon, Jr., president of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa. The College community and Atlanta as well as Decatur alums were invited to the celebration. In January the club, which is headed by Mary Ben WRIGHT Erwin '25, enjoyed a musical program by the Agnes Scott Madrigals.

Evening (Metropolitan Atlanta)

ANOTHER OUTSTANDING book discussion sponsored by the Evening Alumnae Club drew more than fifty alums and friends to hear and take part in a session led Dr. John Gignilliat, of the history department, on Restoring the American Dream by Robert J. Ringer. Participants gathered by the fireside in Winship Dormitory for a three-hour presentation, and many stayed for lunch afterwards in Evans Dining Hall. President Susan Balch Clapham '75 reported the morning

"a great success." In February the College's public relations director, Sara Fountain, told members of the club how word of Agnes Scott is being spread and her publications revamped and updated. Her talk was entitled "Agnes Scott: What It Takes—the ASC Marketing Campaign" and took place in the Alumnae House.

Jacksonville

"NEAR EAST WOMEN" was the topic for discussion by Dr. Mildred Davis Harding '38, who was the speaker for the Jacksonville Club at its Founder's Day celebration February 23. Mildred has lived in Cairo, Baghdad, and Beirut, where she and her husband taught. The group set for a pot-luck "of great variety and superb quality," wrote President Elizabeth Lynn '27, in the home of Peggy Ringel Zell '53. Mothers of currently enrolled Agnes Scotters from the Jacksonville area were invited. Officers were prevailed upon to serve one more year, and in addition to Elizabeth include: Anne Elcan Mann '48, vice president; Betty Libby Alderman '63, secretary; and Betty Ann Green '53, treasurer. Barbara Duncan '78 is career planning representative.

Kentuckiana

THE CHAPEL Restaurant in Louisville was the setting for this year's spring luncheon of the Kentuckiana Club, and Dr. Edward McNair, professor of English and director of public relations emeritus, was guest speaker. President Edith Towers Davis '60 wrote afterwards that his talk on "Anecdotes of Agnes Scott" was delightful and was enjoyed by everyone. The club will have its annual family picnic during the summer and another gathering at Edith's farm in September. Alice Finn Hunt '67 has been elected to succeed Edith as president for the next two years. Barbara Hunt Gresham '66 will serve as career planning liaison, and Dr. Catherine Bates '36 will be admissions representative, following Mary Bryan DuBard '59, who is moving to Birmingham.

Knoxville

AN ENTHUSIASTIC group of alums in the Knoxville area has met with Montene Melson Mason '45 in her home to plan for a new alumnae club. It is scheduled to get underway this spring at a luncheon featuring a talk by Dr. Wallace M. Alston, Agnes Scott's president emeritus, to renew old ties with the College. The steering committee includes Vicky Allen Gardner '62, Polly Anna Philips Harris '50, Maureen Williams Bates '72, Ruth Shepherd Vazquez '62, Dana Nichols Stuckwisch '77, and Sue Czarnitzki Ayers '62.

Tallahassee, Thomasville

ALUMNAE in the Tallahassee-Thomasville area had a "perfectly marvelous time" together at their first meeting February 22, a luncheon at the home of Nancy Love Crane '57 in Tallahassee. Alums car-pooled down from Georgia's Thomasville for a happy gathering with the Floridians. One of the main hopes of this new club is to make active efforts to reach prospective students for the College, and they plan to have an update from the Agnes Scott admissions staff in order to be current with campus developments, academic changes, and admissions requirements. Florence Worthy Griner '52 has steered the group in its successful beginnings.

San Francisco

PRESIDENT Bev Myers Pickett '66 had preparations complete for alums in the Bay Area to meet at her home in San Francisco February 24, when heavy rains paralyzed travel in parts of California and caused a cancellation of the Sunday evening get-together. Admissions Representatives Katherine Akin '76 and Ceil Jarrett '77, who were to bring the group a "Campus Update," had to postpone their visit to the west coast. Bev hopes to plan another event later in the year—perhaps a downtown luncheon in San Fran.

Suncoast

ALUMS in the Tampa-St. Petersburg-Sarasota area have chosen a new name and are hereafter the "Agnes Scott Suncoast Alumnae Club." President Pam Arnold Milhan '72 wrote that the group had enjoyed very much Dr. Marie Pepe's "fascinating slide presentation about women in the arts" on February 16 and that afterwards they partook of "the great Florida sunshine." The club is planning meetings in various parts of the large territory covered by its membership, and this event was a Continental breakfast in Sarasota. Many had driven great distances in order to be present. Marie Pepe reported that the club had "a marvelous group" in attendance and that its number was swelled by many husbands, including her own Charlie. Future club plans include a seminar-workshop at another location.

Suncoast Club met October 20. Speakers were Katherine Akin '76 and Stephanie Segars '81.

THE ~~AGNES~~ SCOTT NETWORK

ALUMNAE/STUDENTS/CAREERS

"Tune in to the ASC Network . . . and turn on an Agnes Scott student to the career she's been looking for all along."

This line, signaling our first national effort to establish an ASC Network, appeared on page one of the fall Quarterly. I stress national, because last April we did a preliminary mailing to Atlanta-area alumnae to test potential interest in such an advisory network. As a result of these first efforts, ninety-five alumnae (and nineteen husbands) are charter members of the ASC Network.

By joining the Network, you become part of a group of alumnae who have offered to assist students and other alumnae to explore, enter, and advance in their career fields. Perhaps you can sponsor a student for one of our off-campus experiential programs:

The Shadow Program— Invite a student into your office to spend a few hours discussing your job, its responsibilities, satisfactions and dissatisfactions, and background required for entry-level jobs.

The Extern Program— Help a student experience your job by having her work with you and your colleagues for an unsalaried week during a school vacation.

The Intern Program— Provide a long-term experience (perhaps a summer, or part-time during the year) that enables a student to perform responsible duties while providing a good introduction to your career field.

As a "Networker" you might prefer to assist in other ways, perhaps as a workshop speaker or an informal career adviser. If you are in a position to help a student or alumna enter and advance within your organization or career field, please sign on as a mentor. A Network of professional women who will serve as mentors for bright, aspiring protégées remains our highest goal.

Perhaps when you read the original copy, you did not apply it to your situation. We hope you will consider it now. The only requirement for joining the Network is an interest in helping students and other alumnae. We need women working outside the home to be sponsors and mentors, but we need all of you who are living in other parts of the country to share your knowledge about, and contacts in, your area with someone moving there and seeking employment. Your experiences and friends may be all she needs to get started.

If you still hesitate, you are not alone. Comments from those already "signed on" have ranged from concern about their helpfulness from a distance to whether a particular career field is of interest to students. In spite of this hesitation, they wrote to us and our formal Network now stretches from Massachusetts to Texas to Alaska. Your role may be different at a distance: you may be asked to write more advice than to sponsor an extern, but full-time internships are possible anywhere, and career mentors are needed in every field regardless of geographic area.

How has the Network helped already? Most apparent is the new Extern Program. As a result of last year's Atlanta mailing, twenty-eight students spent a week during their Christmas or spring break working with alumnae, their spouses, or friends, in such career fields as corporate planning, pediatrics, retail management, and teaching. Next year we hope to expand this program to other areas, especially in the Southeast, but to do this we need to hear from many more of you.

What other practical benefits has the Network had? We can count one student internship (several have been offered, and now the first has been arranged), several Shadow Program sponsors, numerous people called upon for informal advice, and two jobs being vacated by ASC alumnae that have been filled by other ASC women.

Some of this happened through the years, but the ASC Network now gives you a means to increase the frequency of such contacts and assistance in the future. Sign on to the Network today by returning the coupon on this page to Kathleen K. Mooney, Director of Career Planning, Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia 30030. ▲ Kathleen Mooney care become economically important factors.

Sociologically, one knows that the most fundamental structure or model of our society is the family. The divorce rate has skyrocketed, and the structure of the family has fallen apart, yet we continue to act amazed when our national fiber begins to crumble. Watergate and Abscam should be of no surprise as the family structure continues to disintegrate. If women are drafted and if women ultimately see combat duty, how are we going to begin to restructure our nation's stability? The drafting of women is more than an ERA issue. Instead, it is a question of the nation's priorities.

Clearly, there is a need for women in the military services in order to release men for combat duties. But with a surplus of volunteers today, is it necessary to draft women unless the combat-related jobs are included? And are we ready to bring home women in body bags? This argument against as well as the argument for need further study before either can be enacted into law. ▲ military service, to amend their battle-cry to "Equal rights in everything but this!" I believe there is a middle position. It is only fair that if men are forced to register for the draft, then women should be, also. That is, we should assert the eligibility of women for the draft. However, until the Equal Rights Amendment is ratified, we should stand firmly in opposition.

Even if the ERA is finally added to the Constitution, if only to justify the registration of women for the draft, I still personally object to the draft. But I also refuse to be sexist. I am ashamed of the woman who would stand and watch, without the slightest sense of guilt, her husband or brother — but not herself — be drafted. And I sympathize with the woman who, in an ERA-less society, is suddenly being proclaimed "equal" in such a cursory but potentially deadly manner. ▲

Youth Not Wasted on the Young

By Cissie Spiro Aidinoff '51, President, Alumnae Association

THIS COLUMN is the last one I shall write as president of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association. It seems impossible that two years have passed since my election, but my term is now almost over. I do serve until June 30, 1980; but the real work (and fun) ends Alumnae Weekend when I have the honor of passing the gavel on to the president-elect.

Throughout the two years, I have shared my thoughts and impressions of the College with you through this column, and I hope that I have given you some feeling of what I have been seeing when I visited the campus. It is quite difficult to be a student at Agnes Scott today. I treasure my years there, but I couldn't do it again.

I couldn't put in those hours of studying and then talking. I don't have the stamina to jog for miles, play all that bridge, and eat that dining hall food! Also, the women today face basic moral questions that we never had to deal with. We knew that one didn't drink or smoke; the rules told us so, and we generally did what the rules told us to do. Today the women must decide for themselves whether to smoke and whether or not (or when and how much) to drink.

We never had to make decisions on how to run our social lives; with our double date sitting in the back seat, it was not difficult to say no or to move a hand. Today, with the privilege of going to a man's dormitory room at Emory or Tech or having a man in your room, decisions and courses of action or inaction must be thought about and settled ahead of time.

For us communism was evil and totalitarianism had to be eliminated. Today students have to work out detente and the draft. Are they for ERA but really not willing to fight alongside their "equal" brothers?

I respect and admire the students who are at Agnes Scott today, but I do not envy them. Some people feel that youth is wasted on the young—that one's college years are the best years of one's life. Nonsense, I say. Only young people have the stamina to deal with the problems and make the decisions of these difficult years. You have to be young to have the energy to face and resolve the issues which affect your entire life. These college years are just the beginning. If young women have survived at Agnes Scott, then they have had to come to grips with and develop basic values and standards. This is as true today as it was when each of us was at Agnes Scott. My superior Agnes Scott education helped me to get a trainee job in the field in which I had studied. I was able to "succeed" in my work by adapting my Agnes Scott learning techniques and skills. In addition, along the way, I found an intelligent, sensitive, supportive husband and together we have two attractive, bright, and funny children.

I am lucky, I know, but I would not have been able to build my life as I have without the background, challenges, and values that I found at Agnes Scott. I didn't spend the happiest or best years of my life at the College; I am having these years now.

I must attribute a great deal of what I am to Agnes Scott and for that I thank the College. I also thank you, the alumnae of Agnes Scott, for giving me the honor and privilege of serving as your president and for being part of two of the best years of my life. ▲

Trips to Britain and Italy

WON'T YOU join the alumnae who have already signed up for the Alumnae Association's two trips this year. We travel to Great Britain from August 24-September 1 and to Italy from October 28-November 5. There are just a few more weeks to sign up before the deadline.

Come to the Aid of Your College

Now is the Time for All Good Women

ALTHOUGH the overall response to our Million Dollar Challenge Fund is encouraging, we now have fewer alumnae donors to the Agnes Scott Fund as compared to the same time last year. One conjecture of opinion is that we have many new givers for the Million Dollar Challenge Fund while a great number of our regular sustaining contributors are delaying their annual gifts for some reason.

The cause for delay may be that money is tighter this year, and our regular donors are postponing their gifts until the last possible moment. Or some of our regular contributors may not understand the method of giving this year and are waiting for clarification.

Let us urge you to continue your loyal support of the College. Undesignated annual gifts to the Agnes Scott Fund are essential because they may be used where the College needs them most. We do want to sustain the usual thoughtful giving to our Annual Fund. Please act now to send in your regular gift. In addition, we would appreciate your contributing or pledging to the Million Dollar Challenge Fund.

If you have any question about giving at this time, please talk with someone in the Development Office or the Alumnae Office. We can assist you and will gratefully appreciate your generosity.

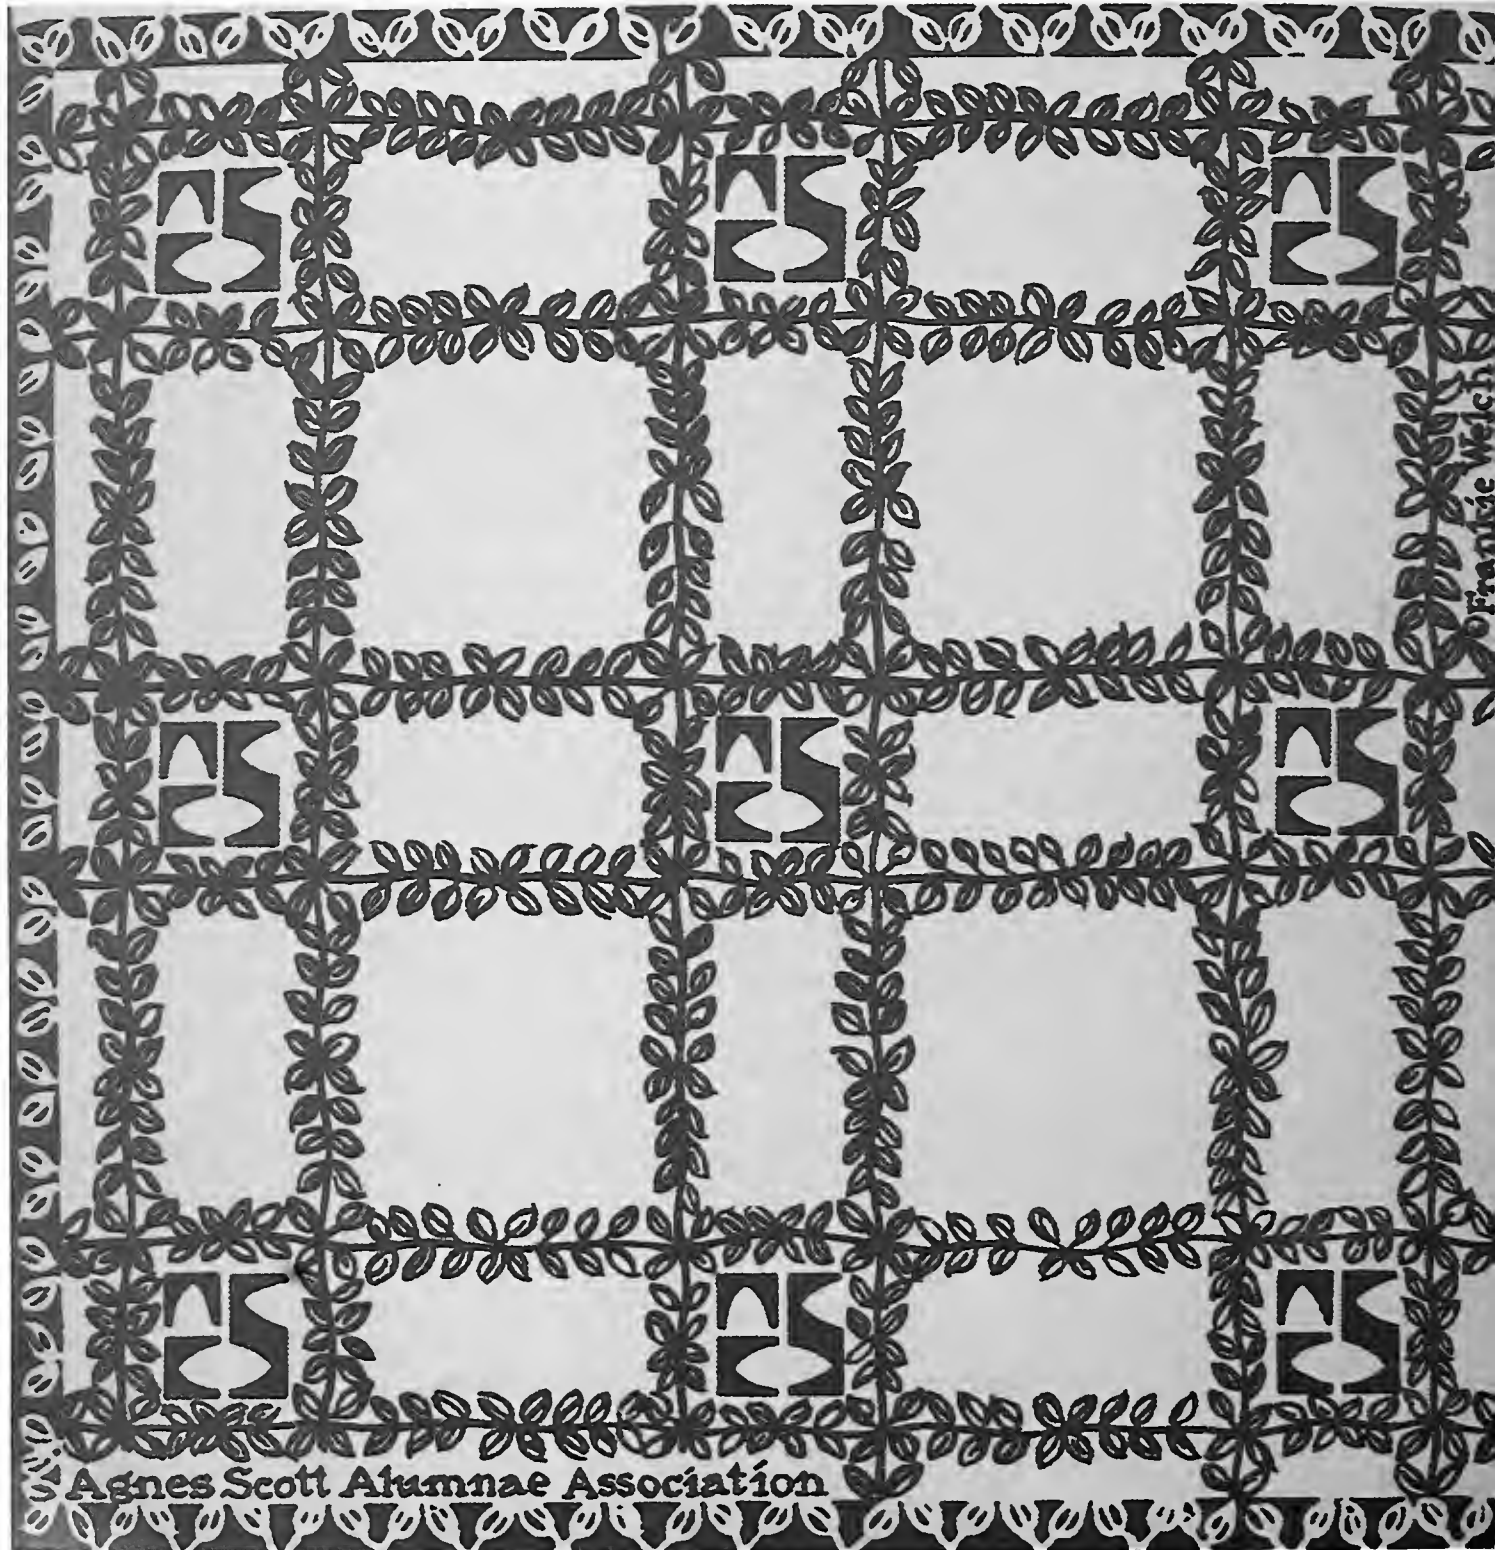

We know that the alumnae will follow their usual magnanimous bent to support the needs of Agnes Scott College. ▲

Fifty-Year Club

Charter Members Inducted

By Mary Ben Wright Erwin '25

IT REALLY was a good party, the first meeting of the Fifty-Year Club, made so by the purpose, the place, and the people.

Traditionally, the fiftieth reunion class has been specifically honored during Alumnae Weekend. The College has wanted to give recognition also to those graduating earlier than the fifty-year class. So the Fifty-Year Club was created. A steering committee (Mary Ben Wright Erwin '25, chairman; Carol Stearns Wey '12, Llewellyn Wilburn '19, Frances Gilliland Stukes '24, Louisa White Gosnell '27, Mary Warren Read '29) was appointed to plan something special. A seated dinner in Rebekah Reception Room (formerly Rebekah Dining Room) on Friday evening, April 18, was the result. The response was enthusiastic. The 175 guests included the oldest alumna, Annie Wylie Preston, 101, Class of 1899, more than forty members of the Class of 1930, and representatives from most of the years between. They came from far and near. Many who could not attend expressed regrets in nostalgic letters, many of which were read during the evening.

President Perry was master of ceremonies and Mrs. Perry returned thanks and asked God's continued blessings. Dr. Paul McCain recognized Annie Wylie Preston of the earliest class and Juanita Greer White '26, from Nevada, who came the greatest distance. Dr. Edward McNair, emeritus professor of English, now College historian and archivist was the speaker, relating stories of Agnes Scott in the '20s and '30s. Frances Gilliland Stukes '24, with Dr. McNair at the piano, led us in singing the Alma Mater and Annie Wylie Preston prayed the benediction.

Officers who were elected for 1980-81 are: president, Josephine Bridgman '27 of Decatur; vice president, Carolyn Smith Whipple '25 of Perry, Ga.; secretary-treasurer, Mary Prim Fowler '29 of Atlanta. Plans are already being made for the next meeting at the time of Alumnae Weekend in April, 1981, for classes 1931 and earlier.

It really was a good party. The purpose — early Agnes Scott alumnae were honored and urged to help the College maintain its standards of excellence and its rich traditions; the place — dear to all of us; the people — bound by love for Agnes Scott.

Report on 1979-80 Gifts to Agnes Scott College

By Dr. Paul M. McCain, Vice President for Development

During 1979-80, the second year Dorothy (Dot) Holloran Addison '43 of Atlanta served as Alumnae Fund Chairman, Agnes Scott received $1,299,117 from 2,544 alumnae representing 29 percent of the active alumnae. This amount included gifts to the Agnes Scott Fund and the Million Dollar Challenge Fund. This gift total from alumnae was one of the largest in the College's history. This figure, however, includes $642,500 in bequests from five alumnae. The fifty-seven class fund chairmen and the 351 class agents had key roles in this successful effort.

During the past year combined gifts of 3,618 alumnae, parents and friends, businesses and foundations to Agnes Scott totaled $1,810,513. This amount includes all gifts for endowment, scholarships, equipment, and many other improvements.

Except for those who preferred to give anonymously, all individuals, foundations, and businesses who made their gifts directly to Agnes Scott are listed on the following pages. These donors made their gifts to the College from July 1, 1979, through June 30, 1980. Gifts received after the latter date will be shown in the report for 1980-81.

The Tower Circle is that group of donors whose gifts were $1,000 or more, the Colonnade Club includes those who gave $500 or more, the Quadrangle Quorum for donors of $250 or more, and the Century Club for those who gave $100 or more. The asterisk (*) in the class listing indicates an alumna who served as a class agent. Double asterisks () are for donors who are now deceased.

Please let the Agnes Scott Fund Office know of any corrections which may be needed so that we can be sure our records are accurate.

The Department

By Dr. R.

IN THE AGNES SCOTT IDEAL, President Gaines wrote that the College should have "a liberal curriculum fully abreast of the best institutions of this country." Many new colleges in the nineteenth century must have taken this as part of their ideal. What was unusual in this instance is that the ideal was being enunciated for a women's institution, where something less was frequently thought sufficient. The early history of the College shows that the Agnes Scott Ideal was difficult to realize precisely because many parents believed that a "finishing school" was all their daughters needed. But President Gaines persevered, and his ideal was realized and accepted.

The philosophy department also has a goal which is difficult of achievement. It is a goal of a slightly different and more particular kind; nevertheless, it is one we pursue with something like the same idealism of our academic forebearers. The goal of the philosophical curriculum shows two equal emphases: the passing on of collected wisdom of our tradition and the training of critical and analytic minds. It is not enough for our students that they learn what the various philosophers of our tradition have thought; they must also learn how to think in the philosophical manner. No one who simply knows what Plato said or what Kant said is philosophically educated. One must also know how to think in those creative and critical ways that define the discipline of philosophy.

That twofold goal makes teaching philosophy at Agnes Scott a challenging enterprise. In some colleges and universities, it is thought enough to teach analytic thinking, while largely ignoring the traditional teachings of philosophers. In others, the rote learning of the philosophical teaching of others, without learning how to think like a philosopher, is thought enough for undergraduates. The temptation is great to fall into one of these two patterns. Some students enjoy the activity of criticism and analysis without the responsibility for learning the tradition; other students enjoy the passivity of absorbing the thought of others without the responsibility of thinking for themselves. We require our students both to absorb the tradition and to think in those critical ways without which the tradition is meaningless.

The curriculum of the department is organized in order to realize these goals.

Although the course offerings have remained essentially the same over the years, there have been some innovations. The greatest was the addition of a series of freshmen level courses. These courses are designed to start students thinking critically about traditional problems, e.g., the existence of God and the relation between morality and the state. Logic, now a freshman course, is also a way of beginning critical thinking. The backbone of the philosophy major remains the year-long sequence in the history of philosophy, stretching from the pre-Socratics to the beginnings of Kant's philosophy. The upper level courses contain standard offerings in such systematic areas as the theory of knowledge and metaphysics and in such historical major figures as Plato and Kant. A notable addition to these is a course in Marx and Marxism, offered jointly with the political science department.

Enrollments in the department are very healthy. These numbers suggested to us the appropriateness of establishing a chapter of Phi Sigma Tau, the national honorary society of philosophy. This has been the chapter's first year and a successful one it was. Programs have included student-led debates, talks by visiting faculty, and even a social event. Topics have been women's liberation, the immortal Socrates, and faith's relation to reason. One of the few organizations on campus dedicated to public discussion of important intellectual issues, Gamma of Georgia chapter has gained a deserved reputation in a rather short amount of time.

There are other opportunities for philosophy students to try their critical skills. Every year for the past three, the Philosophy Colloquium has provoked discussion by bringing on campus spokesmen and women of various controversial topics. Offered in winter quarter, the Colloquium has explored capital punishment, human experimentation, the Marxist, libertarian, and democratic concepts of freedom, and the relation between faith and reason. Also in the winter quarter, philosophy students participate in the Undergraduate Philosophy Conference. The Conference, over twenty years old now, is composed of such colleges as Agnes Scott, Emory, Vanderbilt, Sewanee, and the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. The annual meeting is held on one of the member campuses; only students may present papers and only students may ask questions. This past year, our group went to Sewanee where we delivered two excellent papers. One was on Plato's metaphysics in the later dialogues, given by Cynthia Hampton '80. Carol Chapman '81 gave a paper on Norman Malcolm's assessment of St. Anselm's ontological argument. The Conference is a welcomed opportunity for our students to talk philosophically with students from other colleges and to compare their philosophical training with that of others; they always come back to Agnes Scott impressed with themselves.

Members of the department have some responsibility for preparing students for such accomplishments. In the not so distant past, our complement included Mrs. Merle G. Walker, of happy memory, and Mr. C. Benton Kline. Occasional teachers in the department were President Wallace M. Alston, Mr. Kwai S. Chang, Mr. Richard M. Wolters, and Mrs. Linda B. Cornett. The present members are Mr. David P. Behan and Mr. Richard D. Parry. Mr. Behan received his B.A. from Yale University and M.A. and Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University. After finishing graduate school, he was Dean of Morse College at Yale and taught courses in the Yale philosophy department. He also pursued research as a visiting fellow at Christ Church College, Oxford, coming to Agnes Scott in 1974. Mr. Parry, presently departmental chairman, earned a B.A. at Georgetown University, an M.A. at Yale University, and Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He taught for one year at the University of South Carolina before coming to Agnes Scott in 1967.

Finishing graduate school is just the beginning of an education in philosophy. And the department believes strongly in continued professional growth. The reasons are obvious. In a small college, it is all too easy for one's interests to become parochial; one's thinking can become straitened—not to say enfeebled—by the less than earth shaking problems of the campus. Professional activity can keep this myopia from setting in. Moreover, through research and writing one keeps abreast of developments within his field. And doing so is necessary if we are not to make students victims of outdated theories and interpretations—sometimes as old as the teacher's last year in graduate school.

Richard Parry, department chairman

Parry maintain active research interests. Mr. Behan has given papers at the Locke Conference in Toronto, the Hume Society, the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology, the Georgia Philosophical Society, and the Emory Philosophy Department Colloquium. Mr. Parry has read papers before the American Philosophical Association, the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology, the Georgia Philosophical Society, and the Emory Departmental Colloquium. Both have attended National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Seminars. Mr. Behan going to work with Roderick Chisholm at Brown University and Mr. Parry working with Gregory Blastos and D. J. Furley at Princeton University.

Mr. Behan's publications appear in the Canadian Journal of Philosophy and Philosophical Inquiry. Mr. Parry's appear in the Southern Journal of Philosophy, the Personalist, Philosophy and Phenomenological Research, and the Journal of the History of Philosophy.

Mr. Behan's philosophical interests center around the issue of the person. Concentrating on the work of René Descartes, John Locke, and David Hume, Behan has attempted to reconstruct their philosophical positions on the concept of a person. The issue is a central one in the history of philosophy. In the past, persons have been identified with their physical bodies, with their souls, or with some combination of the two. In his writing and in his teaching, Behan approaches the issue with an insight both original and well-grounded in the philosophical tradition.

Mr. Parry's interests were first of all in contemporary theory of action as it was elaborated by such analytic philosophers as Gertrude Anscombe and Gilbert Ryle. Some of his publications are in this area. However, he has become increasingly interested in the thought of Plato, especially in the early and middle dialogues. There Socrates insistently compares the virtuous man to a craftsman: according to this comparison, the good man is one who knows how to use the assets of his life so that he does well and is happy. The comparison between virtue and craft has been subjected to scholarly scrutiny of late; Parry has been among the scrutinizers, delivering a paper at the Christmas meeting of the American Philosophical Association which uncovered some of the flaws in a recent book on the subject. It might be noted here that the comparison has more than scholarly interest and, in fact, has much to do with teaching ethics. The comparison between craft and virtue offers a theory of morality which is based on a style of life, or a way of living. Such a morality offers an alternative to most present day theories which base morality on following rules.

Finally, a word about our graduates is in order. Some are in law school and in seminary; others are in business and in education. If we are right about philosophy's contribution to developing critical powers, these women are more acute lawyers, ministers, business people, and educators. Naturally, a number have gone to graduate school in philosophy, attending Stanford, Rice, Chapel Hill, University of California at Davis, and Frankfurt. The most recent graduate of our program will be going in the fall to study ancient philosophy with Reginald E. Allen at Northwestern University. Not all our graduates teach philosophy for a profession; but all are philosophers to one degree or another. The critical mind which seeks the fundamental assumptions in any area is not easily stilled. ▲

Associate Professor David Behan

An Agnes Scott Education after a Decade

By Dr. Martine Brownley '69

I AM DEEPLY pleased to have been asked to speak on this occasion honoring those whose academic achievements have been recognized by their election to Phi Beta Kappa. Speeches on these sorts of occasions usually seem to be directed toward the general advantages of a liberal arts education. But as an alumna of this college, as one who has shared with you the academic life here, I want to try to speak more precisely to what the experience of this liberal arts education at Agnes Scott means to a young woman, whether she was a student in the late sixties, as I was, or in the late seventies.

First of all, I want to address something which as a student I took for granted: the importance to me of an education conducted by women for women. There were and still are few colleges or universities in this country — including many women's colleges — that have on their faculties more than a few token women. Yet Agnes Scott from its founding brought to this faculty the best women it could find in the academic profession, women trained in the finest graduate schools in the country — women who were breaking ground in a profession which has been dominated by men since universities began. When I came to Agnes Scott, of the sixty-five faculty at the rank of assistant professor or higher (that is, those holding the Ph.D. degree), thirty-six were women: more than half. Given the position of women in this culture, both when I was in college and also right now, the influence of women faculty, administrators, and staff must be pervasive in order to create an environment in which young women can recognize and develop their full intellectual potential.

This influence of women on women works at every level in the educational process. When I was in graduate school, a number of us were sitting at lunch one day when one of the graduate students mentioned that she had been assigned to give a lecture the next week for the American Literature course. She said that she was very nervous. All of us responded with the usual words of encouragement: that she knew her material well, that she had plenty of poise, that she would do an excellent job. In the midst of the babble she stopped us. "You don't understand," she said. "I've never even heard a woman lecture before." Here was the crux of her uncertainty. I was amazed; I was even more amazed when I found out that of all the male and female graduate students around the lunch table, I was the only one who had ever heard any woman give an academic lecture. It had never occurred to me that there was anything unusual about it.

This example not only relates to those of us who left Agnes Scott and became teachers; it also applies to all the students in the College with me. For all of us, Agnes Scott provided women who were strong individuals, independent and intelligent human beings who through their examples encouraged their students to be the same. Agnes Scott provided less feminist rhetoric and more feminist reality than any place I have seen since. In the context of liberal learning, the defensiveness too often characteristic of feminist polemic was unnecessary. Self-regard and regard for others was a way of life and a way of thinking integral to the women who taught me, and their sense of themselves as women, broadened and deepened by their humanistic learning, communicated itself intangibly, unselfconsciously, but thoroughly. That influence has continued to provide a viable way for me to function in a world which at best is uncomfortable with and at worst hostile to women who desire roles beyond the traditional ones.

Just as my teachers conveyed what it means to be an educated woman without polemic, they also conveyed the essence of devotion to learning without the pretentious affectation or the short-sighted pedantry which too often characterizes the academic profession. I remain grateful that I received at Agnes Scott a rigorously traditional liberal arts education. My best teachers recognized the purpose of this kind of education and made me aware of it — to open the mind, to stimulate the curiosity with material which simultaneously disciplines and matures a mind. My time was not wasted by gimmickry or by modishly fashionable courses, which may perhaps speak to the moment but which do not last. I had none of the interdisciplinary courses which have diluted too many colleges with dilettantism — courses which, I have since learned, are more to the advantage of the faculty than to the student. Agnes Scott's core curriculum insured an education characterized by both variety and depth; I have recently watched both my graduate institution and the university where I now teach return from the do-it-yourself education of the '60s and '70s to the same kind of core curriculum which Agnes Scott has maintained all along, which it never gave up.

Henry David Thoreau writes:

Men sometimes speak as if the study of the classics would at length make way for more modern and practical studies; but the adventurous student will always study classics, in whatever language they may be written and however ancient they may be. For what are the classics but the noblest recorded thoughts of man? They are the only oracles which are not decayed, and there are such answers to the most modern inquiry in them as Delphi and Dodona never gave.

Recognizing that those who know the past have the best chance of understanding the present and the future, Agnes Scott taught me the classics in every area which I studied. It did this so well because it recognized precisely what its task was. Agnes Scott left to the large research universities the specialized professional training which only these institutions have the resources to offer; Agnes Scott left to technical schools and vocational colleges the practical skills which these institutions are best equipped to teach. The finest of my teachers knew that the value of a liberal arts education can only be evaluated in terms of ultimate, not immediate, utility — in terms of the depth and flexibility of the trained mind. Thus, (continued on next page) although Agnes Scott prepared me excellently for graduate school, it prepared me equally well to work on a Washington Congressional staff, which is how I spent the first year after I graduated. My classmates are doctors, social workers, bankers, housewives, teachers, artists, lawyers, and so on. They do their work well because they think well, not because they received specialized training or vocational skills in college.

Agnes Scott prepared us for whatever we chose to do, for the essential reason that pervading the best of my education was the insistence that all learning must have a direct and vital reference to human life. It is said that Hegesias, a teacher in the school of Hedonistic philosophers in Alexandria, despaired of ever attaining happiness. He propounded his philosophy of complete pessimism in the strongest terms to his students. Finally his lectures had to be legally prohibited by Ptolemy because so many suicides resulted from his teaching. In a more positive manner, the best teachers at Agnes Scott presented their material in such a way that it related directly to life as it was lived by their students then, and as it would be lived by them in the future. We felt we were not just an audience for performers, but were respected as individuals and as sharers in the joy of learning. As one of my professors noted to me years later, she was not simply teaching material in her courses, she was using material to teach students. Such a distinction sums up the attitude toward learning that I experienced at Agnes Scott. Learning was not allowed to exist in a vacuum; the material in the classroom was intimately connected with the life we lived.

The strength of humanistic study in any discipline has always been the move from fact, through imagination and intellect, to value. The great humanists have always emphasized the need for this kind of movement. Samuel Johnson, speaking specifically of books, writes:

Many of the books which now crowd the world, may be justly suspected to be written for the sake of some invisible order of beings; for surely they are of no use to any of the corporeal inhabitants of the world. Of the productions of the last bounteous year, how many can be said to serve any purpose of use or pleasure? The only end of writing is to enable the readers better to enjoy life, or better to endure it. . . ."

To enable men and women "better to enjoy life or better to endure it" — to provide the knowledge necessary for conscious living rather than mere existing — that is what humanistic study at its best can do. This kind of education forces students to come to terms with what it means to be a human being and what is required to continue to realize their full humanity. Stephen Spender writes of the transforming power of art, which, if it cannot save external society, can perhaps redeem inner life." In a culture where people seem unable to make lasting commitments to anything, and where ambiguity of every sort — social, religious, sexual, intellectual — seems the rule, only a redeeming of inner life can begin to return individuals to that sense of their own significance which too often seems lost in modern society.

The education I received at Agnes Scott, which informed human minds instead of offering professional or vocational expertise, which emphasized the organic relationship between learning and living, which was directed toward the potential significance of the individual, and which was transmitted by those who were themselves models of the significance of what they taught, gave to me and to many other young women the conscious ability "better to enjoy life, or better to endure it."▲

Albany

A BRAND NEW club is the outcome of a gathering graciously planned by Edith Jennings Black '71 to welcome Mary Boney Sheats, professor of Bible and religion, when she was in the area for a church seminar March 17. Alums were invited to the lovely home of Ann Hilsman Knight '43 and enjoyed hearing Dr. Sheats speak and bring news of the College. "She was the perfect person to make a very divergent group of alums feel welcome and informed," wrote Edith, who has agreed to serve as acting president. "We hope to meet next year for a coffee or luncheon in an alum's home, and several in the group are interested in helping entertain prospective students and an admissions representative from the College in the fall." Serving with Edith as acting treasurer is Marguerite Booth Gray '78. Classes represented ranged from 1923 to 1978—Scotties all! Edith circulated a questionnaire to get feed-back from the group about preferences for meeting times and speakers.

Athens

DIRECTOR OF Financial Aid Bonnie Brown Johnson '70 was honor guest and speaker for the annual luncheon meeting of Athens alumnae March 22 at Davis House. She showed slides of the campus and gave the group an update on events and changes. President Louise McCain Boyce '34 wrote that Bonnie "made an excellent presentation!"

Atlanta

THE WIDESPREAD entry of women into the work force, considered by many to be the major social change of the century, was described by Dr. Caroline Dillman, assistant professor of sociology, in a talk to the Atlanta Alumnae Club March 20. She quoted figures from the U.S. Department of Labor showing that 90 percent of the country's families are no longer "traditional"— headed by a man, who is the sole wage-earner. The large group of alums present joined in the discussion and had many questions for the speaker. Hostess Isabelle Leonard Spearman '29 shared informally with some of her guests information of interest about her various collections of art pieces.

Columbus

Assistant Dean of College Mildred Love Petty '61, center, spoke at Columbus meeting.

A LARGE group of Columbus area alumnae (and even one alum from Auburn, Ala.) gathered at the Big Eddy May 10 for "a delightful luncheon and a most informative talk by Mildred Love Petty '61," wrote Club President Marty McMillan Alvarez '71. Dean Petty told of new curriculum developments as well as physical changes on the campus, and all the guests "thoroughly enjoyed this occasion." Marty gave the group a brief summary of alumnae activities in Columbus during the past several years and an up-date on new alumnae in the area. Serving with her will be Janet Eastburn Amos '68, incoming vice president.

Danville

DANVILLE, VA., alums got themselves together in early May for "a delightful time" at the home of Elizabeth Johnson Thompson '34 and plan to do so again! They are included in the Lynchburg zip code mailing, but that city is a bit of a distance, so with true Agnes Scott initiative, the group just up and met. Margaret Holley Milam '62 was kind enough to write and let the Alumnae Office know about the goings-on. The group plans to meet in the fall and contact high school students who are interested in Agnes Scott.

Houston

HOUSTON'S NEW club president, Melody Snider Porter '78, has found that classes of the alums in her area go all the way from 1911 to 1980, and she hopes to interest all of them in a variety of activities this year. She has written to her constituents for suggestions and for names of possible prospective students for ASC. Houston's spring meeting took place March 22, when the group enjoyed Dr. Edward McNair's "Anecdotes of Agnes Scott" at a luncheon at Greenway Plaza Hotel. "We all thoroughly enjoyed hearing those stories—it was a delightful talk," wrote Marie H. Newton '75, club secretary and also head of Houston alumnae admissions representatives. "He really made the College seem quite alive to those of us living such a distance away and a number of years out of ASC." Marie described the role of our AARs and introduced two student applicants attending the luncheon, Colette Howard and Michelle Pickar.

alumnae club. Director of Alumnae Affairs Virginia Brown McKenzie '47 flew up to be with the group and give them a "Campus Update." Adding a great deal to the program was Susan Whitten, Agnes Scott sophomore, speaking from a student's point of view. "We are all so glad finally to have an 'official' organization here in Lynchburg," wrote Ann. "Virginia was wonderful and brought us up to date on the many changes taking place on campus and in the metropolitan Atlanta-Decatur area. So many of us were delighted to find other alumnae right here in Lynchburg!" Ann heard from friends and from alums in the area who couldn't make this first meeting but plan to come next time. Anna Katherine Fulton Wilson '38 drove down from Lexington, Va. Ann's teen-age daughters Lisa, Janie, and Susan helped hostess. Officers serving with Ann will be Sally Echols Leslie '76, vice president, June Driskill Weaver '48, secretary, and Jody Hopwood Turner '73, treasurer.

Memphis

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR Claire M. Hubert was honor guest and speaker for the Memphis Alumnae Club at their luncheon March 15 at the Colonial Country Club. She spoke on "Women In French Culture," describing their position as compared with that of American women. She brought news to the campus also and said that although many schools were gradually dropping language requirements, Agnes Scott still maintained her traditional standards in that field. Betty Mann Edmunds '70 heads the Memphis group and wrote that they all "enjoyed Mrs. Hubert's presentation very much."

"PRESIDENTIAL POLITICS" was the title of Gus Cochran's talk for the New England Club March 26. A large group of alums and

Knoxville

THE EFFORTS and enthusiasm of Montene Melson Mason '45 and her steering committee resulted in a highly successful inaugural meeting of Knoxville area alums. A very large group gathered for luncheon March 22 at the Hyatt Regency and heard President Emeritus Wallace M. Alston speak on "Agnes Scott's Friendship With Robert Frost." Sis Burns Newsome '57, of the Agnes Scott Board of Trustees, "came up from Atlanta to boost the first meeting of a club in her hometown," wrote Montene. "Her mother, Mrs. Brantley Burns, came to the luncheon also. It was gratifying to have such a good group to welcome Dr. Alston. His program was well received, and I saw how much he is appreciated and loved." Polly Anna Phillips Harris '50 has been chosen president, Ruth Shepherd Vazquez '62, vice president, Dana Nichols Stuckwisch '77, membership chairman, Vicky Allen Gardner '62, treasurer, Maureen Williams '72, secretary, and Sue Czarnitzki Ayers '63, publicity chairman.

husbands as well as four prospective students and their mothers attended the luncheon at the Harvard Club of Boston. Associate professor of political science and department head, Dr. Cochran has been in the Boston area for research during his sabbatical from Agnes Scott and has spoken to several nearby alumnae groups. His most interesting talk provoked much discussion among listeners. Continuing as club leaders are Dudley Lester Tye '67, Harriet Talmadge Mill '58, Charlotte King Sanner '60, and Betty Whitaker Wilson '68.

Richmond

A BOX LUNCH gathering at the home of Kay Gwaltney Remick '61 brought together Richmond alums and some prospective students March 29 to hear Kathleen Mooney, director of career planning, tell of the activities of her office at Agnes Scott. Steering Committee Chairman Nancy Thomas Hill '56 wrote that it was "an excellent presentation," and that everyone enjoyed the informal setting of Kay's home rather than a restaurant this time. Succeeding Nancy as chairman is Betty Alvis Girardeau '64.

Savannah

A VISIT to Savannah by Dr. Marvin B. Perry, Jr., brought alums together to receive news of the College and to renew their friendship with the President. "Everyone very much enjoyed hearing him and being together for luncheon," said Lydia Wammock Thompson '63, vice president of the club. In the absence of the president, Nell Hemphill Jones '38, who was out of town, Lydia gave generously of her time and interest in planning the event, which gathered alums from the twenties through the seventies and met at the Oglethorpe Club March 22. Frances Belford Olsen '37 has been asked to serve as secretary.

St. Louis

TO CELEBRATE Founder's Day, alumnae in St. Louis gathered at the home of Anne Felker Cataldo '67 for a salad and dessert pot-luck luncheon March 29 and had a campus update from Alumna Admissions Representative Julia Doar Grubb '61, who had visited the College. "We all enjoyed hearing about Agnes Scott as it is now and seeing copies of the Profile and other ASC literature Julia brought," wrote Club Secretary Linda Ozee Lewis '71. Ann Roberts Divine '67 is president of the club, which plans a fall party for prospective students.

Tidewater

TIDEWATER AREA alums from the Newport News-Norfolk-Virginia Beach area were invited to a "bring-a-salad" luncheon at the home of Betty Lockhart Anglin '59 March 29 and to hear College news from Judy Maguire Tindel '73, director of admissions. "Judy was a wonderful speaker," reported Club President Chee Kludt Ricketts '68. "She made each of us very proud to have attended Agnes Scott and inspired us to be alert for other young women who might have an interest in ASC. She took us on a walking slide tour of the campus, pointing out physical changes, such as renovation of the library, and told about current requirements, tuition, courses, and career planning, as well as social changes. She suggested ways we could serve Agnes Scott and enthusiastically answered our many questions." Chee is succeeded by Susan McCann Butler '68, incoming president. Jean Price Knapp '57 is the new secretary-treasurer.

Triangle

"PENNY CAMPBELL did a wonderful job for us," wrote Catherine Auman DeMaere '69, president of Chapel Hill-Raleigh-Durham area alums, after their meeting April 26 at the Carolina Inn at which the Agnes Scott history professor spoke. "She brought slides which showed automatically during the social hour before luncheon, and this served as excellent conversation material, bringing back happy memories and updating everyone on campus changes. She particularly brought news of retired professors, and we were delighted to hear about them. She also told about her sabbatical time at Africare in Washington, D.C." Among alums present was Dr. Virginia Sutenfield '38, a former regional vice president of ASC Alumnae Association, who has recently moved to Chapel Hill from Connecticut. New officers of the club are Betty Fuller Smith '61, president; Virginia Neb '72, secretary; and Bettye Ashcraft Senter '45, treasurer.

Washington, D.C.

AN INFORMAL get-together, blue jeans and all, brought alums from the District area to President Joan Adair Johnston's home in Fairfax, Va., March 15 for a salad-casserole pot-luck luncheon and a sharing of ideas for future club activities as well as a recounting of what each one present had been doing, both fun and work. Corky Feagin Stone '60 told of her newly published book, expanded from her doctoral dissertation. Plans for the future include a splash party and a luncheon with speaker from the College. Joan continues in office and will have serving with her Sandra Creech Birdsong '63, vice president; Martha Griffith Kelly '64, secretary; Frances Folk Zygmunt '71, treasurer; Barbara DuVall Averch '58, A.A.C.W. representative; and Chris McNamara Lovejoy '70, Maryland advisor.

Three Sizeable Gifts Designated for Scholarships

Carolyn Strozier

THE Carolyn Strozier Scholarship Fund of $10,715 was established in 1979 by her mother and friends as a memorial to this member of the Class of 1941 who had been active in the Alumnae Association while on the staff of Rich's.

The Mason Pressly Young Scholarship of $10,000 was established in 1979 by the Blake P. Garrett, Sr., Family of Fountain Inn, South Carolina, in memory of this long-time Presbyterian medical missionary to China and father of two alumnae: Louise Young Garrett '38 and Josephine Young (Mrs. Francis) Sullivan '44 of Greer, South Carolina.

An alumna who wishes to remain anonymous made a gift of $10,000 to establish a new scholarship in 1979.

Recent Bequests Benefit College

THE GENEROSITY of alumnae who remember the College in their wills is greatly appreciated. In the month of May alone the College received the money from bequests of four alumnae: Mary Stewart McLeod '23, Helena Hermance Kilgour '26, Marie Whittle Well-slager '26, and Margaret J. Watson '37.

One important reason Agnes Scott continues to be a respected, academically-strong, solvent institution is that her alumnae and other friends, through gifts and bequests, help to provide for faculty salaries, library improvement, special equipment, preservation of campus buildings, and scholarships for deserving students.

ASC Women in Politics, Reply

THE WINTER issue of the Alumnae Quarterly, which will be mailed in January, will feature Agnes Scott women in politics. The editors request all alumnae now holding or running for an office to write to the Alumnae Quarterly and to list the following information: name; Agnes Scott class; city, county, state, or national office now being held or sought; and party affiliation.

If the alumna has some special episode in her political career which she would like to share in writing, the Quarterly staff will be happy to read about it, and the information may be used in a story, "Agnes Scott Women in Politics." All pertinent information should be in the Alumnae Office by November 15 to be included in the winter (January) issue.

Chapel Organ Is '80 Class Project

AS ITS GIFT to the College, the Class of 1980 has chosen the project of restoring the 1940 Austin organ in Gaines Chapel, which, aside from age, has other, more severe problems. A few days following the 1979 Commencement, a leather "blowout" occurred in the right side portion of the organ in the regulator, or reservoir, which furnishes the necessary wind supply. At a nominal cost this was repaired in time for the opening of the '79/'80 session. Unfortunately, in early September 1979, a much more extensive blowout occurred in the leather of the other side of the organ. It is of such magnitude that even a temporary patch would cost more than a thousand dollars.

The College is exploring the possibility of a complete rehabilitation of the instrument by Austin, who would replace the worn-out parts, bring usable pipe work up-to-date, and improve the overall tonal scheme. This would cost approximately $150,000. In the meantime, the College is using the 1970 Schlicker organ in Maclean Auditorium for convocations held in Gaines by linking a microphone to the sound system in Gaines.

The Class of '80 has donated the $300 in its treasury and is asking each member to pledge donations of at least a dollar a month for the next two years. In July 1982, after the class has made its entire donation, it will challenge all other classes to match its donation. The Class has already pledged $1,538, and $173 has been paid.

Class officers are Sandy Burson, president; Dottie Enslow, vice president; Elizabeth Mosgrove, secretary; and Ann Huffines, fund chairman.

We applaud the Class of '80 for its timely gift and look forward to hearing "live" music in Gaines again.

New President Begins Term

Jackie Simmons Gow '52

It is with much pride and no small amount of trepidation that I want to thank you for electing me president of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association. This is a great honor and I hope that together you and I can be of real service to Agnes Scott.

As president-elect my first assignment was to help Dr. Paul McCain, vice president for development at ASC, by organizing the 1980 Alumnae Phonathon.

For each of five nights during mid-May, ten to fifteen Agnes Scott alumnae from the greater metropolitan Atlanta area spent two hours telephoning a total of more than 1,000 alumnae throughout the country. The Trust Company Bank graciously made some of their offices and telephone lines available for this project.

The College and the Alumnae Association are grateful to the fifty alumnae who made these calls:

Debbie Smith Abernathy, Jane King Allen, Mary Anne Barlow, Penny Brown Barnett, Mary Rainey Bridges, Melodye Brown, Susan Balch Clapham, Margaret Benton Davis, Lori Riley Day, Leslie Doyle, Tish DuPont, Lib Blackshear Flinn, Jackie Simmons Gow, Martha Scott Haley, Jackie Josey Hall, Shelia Wilkins Harkleroad.

Mary McConkey Reimer, Kathy Oates

Roos, Martha Davis Rosselot, Sarah Quinn Slaughter, Betty Lou Houck Smith, Betty Wood Smith, Jean Chalmers Smith, Louise Stakely, Julia Grier Storey, Frances Gilliland Stukes, Elizabeth Wells, Jane Taylor White, Pat Cooper Wilburn, Liz Jenkins Willis, Virginia Allen Woods, Betty Ann Gatewood Wylie.

Although some of us felt slightly hesitant about our abilities in this endeavor, when the job was done, we all admitted it was great fun getting to chat with alums from every state. And it was quite satisfying to realize we had been successful in our undertaking for Agnes Scott. Most alumnae were delighted to have this contact with the College, and we who called were pleased to have comments from those reached.

We do thank you for your interest and support. As a direct result of the Phonathon, Agnes Scott received $12,840 in specific pledges and, we hope, a similar amount from "intended" gifts and pledges. Thus, we expect the total gifts from the Phonathon to amount to over $20,000.

Agnes Scott is indebted to all the alumnae who participated in the Phonathon, and we also sincerely appreciate the fine response of you alumnae who contributed.

Again, thank you for electing me. I look forward to a rewarding and exciting two years of working with you.

Treat Yourself to College Items

SIX PEN AND INK sketches of campus scenes by John Stuart McKenzie have been printed on fine text paper suitable for framing. The drawings which may be displayed singly or as a group are 5" x 7½" printed on paper 7¼" x 11". The set of six may be purchased from the Alumnae Office for ten dollars ($10.00) including tax and mailing cost.

Stationery suitable for gifts and for your personal correspondence is now available also. These same six sketches have been printed on folded note paper and packaged with matching envelopes. Each package contains twelve folded note cards (two copies of the six scenes) and twelve envelopes. The packages of stationery may be purchased from the Alumnae Office for five, fifty ($5.50), which includes tax and mailing cost.

The project committee of the Alumnae Association arranged with designer Frankie Welch to produce a scarf especially for us.

Agnes Scott Alumnae Quarterly

Outstanding Alumnae for 1980

ALL OF AGNES SCOTT'S graduates are outstanding women. As President Perry stated in the induction ceremony for the Fifty-Year Cub, their "exemplary lives continue to be Agnes Scott's finest testimonial, the most telling measure of her success." The impact of these former students on their respective communities is frequently publicized in newspapers or noticed by classmates or other friends who send clippings to the Alumnae office or write commendations.

The Awards Committee consider all the nominations and customarily select three to be cited during Alumnae Weekend at the Annual Meeting. Hand inscribed award certificates were presented this year to: Evangeline Papageorge '28, distinguished career, Carrie Scandrett '24, service to the College; and Juanita Greer White '26, community service.

Evangeline Papageorge has been a human dynamo ever since she, as a child, dressed herself in her mother's tablecloth and wrote on the door with chalk to imitate her teachers. At Agnes Scott she majored in chemistry and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa; then she proceeded to Emory University for her M.S.; University of Michigan, Ph.D.; and Yale for postdoctoral studies.

Dr. Papageorge became Emory Medical School's first full-time woman faculty member when she was hired as assistant in biochemistry and progressed to executive associate dean. Since her retirement in 1975, she has been consultant to the office of the dean, Emory University School of Medicine. Having spent a half century teaching and advising at Emory University, she is admirably referred to as a "catalyst of learning."

As for service to the College, the committee chose Carrie (Dick) Scandrett who has been a beloved and influential member of the Agnes Scott community for fifty-five years, first in an assistant's position in Dean Nannette Hopkins' office, through thirty-one years as dean of students, and still in retirement as counselor and friend. By administration, faculty, and alumnae she is known for her propriety, integrity, strength, and loyalty to the College.

Her neat, inviting home, touching the periphery of the campus, is, and has been through all these years, a favorite visiting place for students and faculty who have known her and therefore grown to love her.

The alumna who was honored for her community service is Juanita Greer White, magna cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Agnes Scott and Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins, who has used her intelligence and energy to improve the situation of the aging, the status of women, and the outreach of higher education.

In 1972 she received the Distinguished Nevadan Award, and in 1976 the life sciences building at the University of Nevada was named Juanita Greer White Hall because this soft-spoken, well-organized research chemist saw the need for a degree granting, four-year public college in southern Nevada and embarked on a campaign to make this dream a reality.

Yes, all of our graduates are outstanding, and many deserve special recognition. The Awards Committee of the Alumnae Association would appreciate your help in identifying those alumnae whose achievements should be honored. Please fill out the nomination form on this page and send any biographical information you wish to be considered by the Awards Committee. This year's deadline for receipt of these nominations is September 30.
